

Case Study Paper Format

Directions: Based on your observations, you will write a Case Study paper that includes the following elements:

Heading (Your name and other relevant information)

Date:

Child's Name:

Child's Age:

Observation Method:

Start Time:

End Time:

Total time of Observation:

- Setting (Playground, classroom, hallway):
- Activity (i.e. course instruction, independent practice, independent play, group play):
- Aim: State the general areas of development that you are interested in observing. You will be observing one or more of the following: language development; literacy behaviors; psycho-motor development; patterns and behaviors during play; time on task; interactions with adults and children; conflict resolution strategies; other behaviors as appropriate for age of child.
- Objectives: State the specific abilities you would like to observe, such as social skills, emotional self-regulation, vocabulary repertoire, attention span.
- Observations: This section contains narrative text, and perhaps tables, graphs and/or figures, reporting the results of your observations. You are not assessing or explaining what the observations mean yet. This is the factual part of the Case Study; you are reporting what you saw and heard.
- Conclusion: This is the qualitative section, in which you discuss your interpretation of the results. Some areas to be addressed in this section include: comparing the individual child to normative samples; assessing the tasks the child engaged in and the developmental appropriateness of these tasks; whether or not the child is meeting the criterion of academic standards; the specific interest areas of the child.
- Recommendations: Finally, you will make two or more suggestions to better assist the child in improving his/her skills, abilities, and progress. If you were the child's teacher, these suggestions would be provided to parents or guardians, teachers, a developmental specialist, school psychologist, other support staff, or administrators. Note: I will not provide a copy of this Case Study to anyone. Therefore, be clear and precise in this section.

Writing Games Christine Pears Casanave, 2005-04-11 This book explores how writers from several different cultures learn to write in their academic settings and how their writing practices interact with and contribute to their evolving identities as students and professionals in academic environments in higher education. Embedded in a theoretical framework of situated practice, the naturalistic case studies and literacy autobiographies include portrayals of undergraduate students and teachers, master's level students, doctoral students, young bilingual faculty, and established scholars, all of whom are struggling to understand their roles in ambiguously defined communities of academic writers. In addition to the notion of situated practice, the other powerful concept used as an interpretive framework is captured by the metaphor of games, a metaphor designed to emphasize that the practice of academic writing is shaped but not dictated by rules and conventions; that writing games consist of the practice of playing, not the rules themselves; and that writers have choices about whether and how to play. Focusing on people rather than experiments, numbers, and abstractions, this interdisciplinary work draws on concepts and methods from narrative inquiry, qualitative anthropology, and sociology, and case studies of academic literacy in the field of composition and rhetoric. The style of the book is accessible and reader-friendly, eschewing highly technical insider language without dismissing complex issues. It has a multicultural focus in the sense that the people portrayed are from a number of different cultures within and outside North America. It is also a multivocal work; the author positions herself as both an insider and outsider and takes on the different voices of each other voices that appear are those of her case study participants and published authors and their case study participants. It is the author's hope that readers will find multiple ways to connect their own experiences with those of the writers the book portrays.

Evaluating Student Learning

Outcomes in Counselor Education Casey A. Barrio Minton, Donna M. Gibson, Carrie A. Wachter Morris, 2016-04-14 This timely text describes the role of program evaluation in counselor education and provides step-by-step guidance for faculty seeking to develop comprehensive Student Learning Outcome (SLO) evaluation plans to meet accountability expectations. It serves as a blueprint for demystifying the SLO process and making the switch from an input-based measure of productivity that focuses on what counseling programs do to an outcome-based approach that concentrates on the quality of learning through evidence based assessment of students knowledge and skills The first and second parts of the book lay the foundation for the SLO process and provide practical guidance for identifying and developing direct and indirect measures of student learning Part III offers strategies for creating measures collecting managing and reporting student data and using data to ensure competence In Part IV counselor educators across the country offer hands on application through a wide variety of SLO activities and rubrics linked to each of the curricular and specialty areas of the 2016 CACREP Standards Requests for digital versions from ACA can be found on www.wiley.com To purchase print copies please visit the ACA website Reproduction requests for material from books published by ACA should be directed to publications@counseling.org
