1. The authors may also wish to include some brief word about their isochronous criterion of what must be accomplished in the individual cell during these periods. The criterion should not be too strict, as the authors indicated in a paper they have just written, and should reflect the fact of extensive overlap, frequently more than 50%, between the two periods. Nevertheless, it is a question of emphasis, and the authors are free to make as strong a case as they wish for the value of the criterion. (2)

There have been attempts to establish special monitoring and assessment programmes for contaminated areas. During winter, from 1998 to 2000, in Southern China, about 100,000 people in six coastal provinces and municipalities and 100,000 people in the inland provinces were tested for lead, cadmium, mercury, and other heavy metals. The results showed that the levels of these metals in the blood of the general population were within the normal range. However, the levels of lead and cadmium in the blood of some people were found to be higher than the normal range. This may be due to the fact that these people had been exposed to lead and cadmium in the past.

8. The above 1994-1995 survey, conducted after nearly 10 years' civil war, is the first ever undertaken in great cooperation with armed and the insurgents, and the first attempt to use the number of insurgents remaining in the field and the armed wings of the insurgency forces to measure the extent of the war. It is the first survey, based on the number of armed and unarmed civilians killed and injured, and is the first survey of the insurgency forces since the conflict was declared in 1991.
