Introduction

Reading a book with a child – whether it's your child, grand-child, niece, nephew or neighbor – is a wonderful way to spend time together. Children learn by example and will enjoy reading if they see the adults in their lives reading. Reading to your child is a fun way to share thoughts and learn new things. It is also a free activity that you can do every day for a few minutes or a few hours!

It's never too early to start reading to a child; start right from the cradle! Reading aloud can help calm a fussing baby or entertain a quiet one, and it can do wonders for you, too. Reading aloud can give you and your baby many moments you will long treasure. Time spent reading a story to a pre-schooler will help prepare them for school. Reading with young children helps them to become better readers and to enjoy reading as they grow up. Children love to hear a story or to have their family listen to them read aloud. Reading together as a family will create special memories for you and for your children and it is a skill that everyone can learn. Let's get started!

Getting Started

Begin by choosing a text that you would like to share with your family. One way to choose a book might be to go to the library with your tutor and select something from the children's department. This will also help introduce you to navigating the children's department of the library in order to choose a book on a subject that your children would enjoy. For example, if you have a child who loves fire trucks, you could practice searching in the catalogue for books on that topic, or asking the reference librarian where books on the subject of fire trucks can be found. If you don't know where to start, ask the reference librarian for some ideas on books that would be age appropriate for your child/children.

Families for Literacy

If you have a pre-schooler in your life (could be a grand-child or niece or nephew too), talk to your Literacy Staff about the Families for Literacy program. If available at your library, Families for Literacy provides free, beautiful children's books for literacy program participants with young children and holds special events to promote reading for families.
