Achieving Next Generation Literacy Maureen Connolly, Vicky Giouroukakis, 2016-04-29 As a teacher what you want most is for your students to learn to immerse themselves in rich and challenging content and leave your classroom better prepared for school and life In English language arts and humanities this includes developing the multifaceted reading writing thinking and communication skills that constitute next generation literacy including the ability to Read complex text independently Develop strong content knowledge through reading writing listening and speaking Tailor communication in response to different audiences tasks purposes and disciplines Comprehend text as well as critique it Value evidence in arguments they read hear or develop Use technology strategically and capably Understand perspectives and cultures that differ from their own But as a teacher you also know how much is riding on THOSE TESTS achievement tests from the national assessment consortia the SAT and ACT and independent state assessments Is it possible to help students succeed on mandated tests without sacrificing your values your creativity and their education Yes it is possible This book shows you how This not a test prep book It is not about drill and kill practices that narrow learning so that students will pass an exam Instead authors Maureen Connolly and Vicky Giouroukakis present a lesson planning approach for the secondary classroom that generates test success as a byproduct of comprehensive literacy learning After a comparative analysis of how current ELA assessments measure literacy they model a backward design based process for using these test items as a tool to create engaging and effective instruction With 6 sample lessons 42 instructional techniques and tips for differentiation this practical resource will empower you to help the students you love become capable literate individuals who are also well prepared to ace high stakes tests Economic Growth and the Middle Class in an Economy in Transition Zoya Nissanov, 2017-01-24 This book studies the evolution of the middle class in Russia after the fall of the Soviet Union Using data from the RLMS Russian

Longitudinal Monitoring Survey the volume covers the period of transition 1991-2008 during which many fundamental economic reforms were implemented. The first part of the book is devoted to a discussion of the concept of middle class and a description of the economic situation in Russia during the transition period. Particular attention is given to variations in the distribution of Russian incomes and the estimated importance of the middle class. The second part of the book focuses on the link between the middle class and income bipolarization. The third and last section of the book uses the semiparametric mixture model to discover how many different groups may be derived from the income distribution in Russia as well as what the main socio-economic and demographic characteristics of those groups are. The mobility of households into and out of the middle class during the transition period is also studied in hopes of determining the factors that contribute to such mobility. Using rigorous empirical methods, this volume sheds light on a relatively unstudied economic group and provides insight for countries which are about to enter a transition period. As such, this book will be of great interest to researchers in economics and inequality as well as professionals and practitioners working with international organizations.

Randomized Control Trials in the Field of Development Florent Bédécarrats, Isabelle Guérin, François Roubaud, 2020-09-17. In October 2019, Abhijit Banerjee, Esther Duflo, and Michael Kremer jointly won the 51st Sveriges Riksbank Prize in Economic Sciences in Memory of Alfred Nobel for their experimental approach to alleviating global poverty. But what is the exact scope of their experimental method known as randomized control trials (RCTs)? Which sorts of questions are RCTs able to address and which do they fail to answer? The first of its kind, Randomized Control Trials in the Field of Development: A Critical Perspective provides answers to these questions, explaining how RCTs work, what they can achieve, why they sometimes fail, how they can be improved, and why other methods are both useful and necessary. Bringing together leading specialists in the field from a range of backgrounds and disciplines—economics, econometrics, mathematics, statistics, political economy, socioeconomics, anthropology, philosophy, global health, epidemiology, and medicine—it presents a full and coherent picture of the main strengths and weaknesses of RCTs in the field of development. Looking beyond the epistemological, political, and ethical differences underlying many of the disagreements surrounding RCTs, it explores the implementation of RCTs on the ground outside of their ideal theoretical conditions and reveals some unsuspected uses and effects, their disruptive potential, but also their political uses. The contributions uncover the implicit worldview that many RCTs draw on and disseminate and probe the gap between the method's narrow scope and its success, while also proposing improvements and alternatives. Without disputing the contribution of RCTs to scientific knowledge, Randomized Control Trials in the Field of Development warns against the potential dangers of their excessive use, arguing that the best use for RCTs is not necessarily that which immediately springs to mind. Written in plain language, this book offers experts and laypeople alike a unique opportunity to come to an informed and reasoned judgement on RCTs and what they can bring to development.
