1. The first step in the accounting process is to identify the business transactions that affect the business. This step is often referred to as the "analysis" step. It involves identifying the events and transactions that are relevant to the business and determining whether they should be recorded in the accounting system. This step is crucial because it determines the scope and content of the accounting records.

2. The second step is to record the transactions in the accounting system. This is typically done using a double-entry system, where each transaction is recorded in two accounts: a debit account and a credit account. This ensures that the accounting system remains balanced and that the total debits equal the total credits. This step is often referred to as the "journalizing" step.

3. The third step is to post the transactions to the ledger. This involves transferring the information from the journal to the ledger, where it is organized into T-accounts. This step is often referred to as the "posting" step.

4. The fourth step is to prepare the financial statements. This involves summarizing the information in the ledger into a set of financial statements, including the balance sheet, income statement, and statement of cash flows. This step is often referred to as the "summarizing" step.

5. The fifth step is to close the books. This involves closing the temporary accounts (such as revenues, expenses, and dividends) and transferring their balances to the permanent accounts (such as retained earnings). This step is often referred to as the "closing" step.

EBOOK: Financial Accounting (GE), 8e Robert Libby, Frank Hodge, Patricia Libby, 2016-04-16 EBOOK Financial Accounting GE 8e     Study Guide for Use with Financial Accounting Robert Libby, Patricia A. Libby, Daniel G. Short, 2003 Libby Libby Short wrote this text based on their belief that the subject of financial accounting is inherently interesting but financial accounting textbooks are often not. They believe most financial accounting textbooks fail to demonstrate that accounting is an exciting field of study and one that is important to future careers in business. When writing this text they considered career relevance as their guide when selecting material and the need to engage the student as their guide to style pedagogy and design. Libby Libby Short is the only financial accounting text to successfully implement a real world single focus company approach in every chapter. Students and instructors have responded very favorably to the use of focus companies and the real world financial statements. The companies chosen are engaging and the decision making focus shows the relevance of financial accounting regardless of whether or not the student has chosen to major in accounting.
