Abstract: This study was designed to determine the extent to which the use of a computer-based decision support system (DSS) affects the performance of a complex task. The DSS was designed to assist in the selection of a course of action for a simulated military mission. The results of the study indicate that the use of the DSS significantly improved the performance of the task. The DSS was found to be effective in reducing the time required to complete the task and in increasing the accuracy of the results. The study also found that the DSS was effective in reducing the number of errors made by the users. The results of the study suggest that the use of a DSS can be a valuable tool for improving the performance of a complex task.
