Spelling Rebecca Treiman, 2013-06-29

are the findings that Wade Woolley and Siegel obtained when they studied children for whom English was a second language Although the second language speakers performed more poorly than the native speakers on tests of syntactic knowledge phoneme deletion and pseudoword repetition the second language speakers were not worse than the native speakers in spelling These results suggest that even if children have not fully mastered the sound system of their second language they need not be disadvantaged in spelling it The findings appear to pose a challenge to views of reading and spelling that place primary emphasis on phonology The Muter and Snowling study together with the Nunes Bryant and Bindman study broadens the focus by examining aspects of spelling beyond phonology Muter and Snow ling in their longitudinal study of British school children examined the degree to which various linguistic skills measured between the ages of 4 and 6 predicted spelling ability at age 9 The results support the idea that phonological skill plays an important role in spelling development and further suggest that awareness of phonemes is more strongly related to spelling ability than awareness of rimes In addition grammatical awareness appears to predict spelling skill Children who are able to reflect on meaning relationships among words may be in a position to understand how this information is represented in English spelling

Mastering High-Frequency Words Joan Westley, 2024-12-31

The 180 Lessons in this sequential system of daily word work will help students develop fluency in reading and writing high frequency words They will talk about the words look for special features use letters to build the words and write them Includes blackline masters to copy letters word tiles and header cards Many teachers use word walls to display high frequency words they are hoping their students will soon master The words are usually listed in alphabetical order for easy reference Whenever students need to use one of these words in their writing they can simply find its correct spelling on the word wall Most teachers find this to be an effective way to remind students how these difficult words are spelled However word walls on their own are not sufficient to guide students to word mastery To make word walls really work requires more than just putting the words up on the wall The words need to be systematically introduced taught and reinforced over time That is what Word Wall Work is all about
