

State of Our Schools Speech by Superintendent Ann Clark

Thank you, Steven. Good morning, everyone. It's a pleasure to welcome all of you to our annual State of Our Schools event. Thank you for making time to join us.

As Steven told you, we first met when he was in middle school at Alexander Graham and I was the principal there. It has been my privilege to follow his journey from student to successful adult. We want every student in CMS to make that journey successfully. Ensuring that every child completes the journey is the mission of CMS. All of us in this room today care about our children and their education.

Educating a child is a process that begins at home and continues all the way through school and into the workplace and the wider world. Education cannot be accomplished or measured in a single day, a single test or a single year. It's a lifelong journey that builds on success in the early grades to create a foundation for learning later on. It's a continuum of learning and support that begins when a child enters school and continues all the way through high school and beyond. So many people are needed along the way. Parents, teachers, school staff, administrators all have a role to play. So do many others – volunteers, working professionals, citizens, elected officials.

We are fortunate to have the support of our district employees and the wider community. I've asked seven people who are involved with CMS to tell their stories during today's program and they are here on stage. Let me introduce them now and then you'll hear from them as we go along. I will introduce them starting from your left. Psalms Olivia Phifer White is a senior at Harding University High School. Next to her is Katie B. Morris, who chairs the Belk Foundation. Mark Rohlinger is the plant technical director for Bosch Rexroth in Charlotte. Lecia Shockley is the 2014 CMS Teacher of the Year and teaches second grade at Selwyn Elementary. Michael

Ayres,2000-02-01 In 1993 the United Nations sponsored national elections in Cambodia signaling the international community s commitment to the rehabilitation and reconstruction of what was by any measure a shattered and torn society Cambodia s economy was stagnant The education system was in complete disarray Students had neither pens nor books teachers were poorly trained and classrooms were literally crumbling Few of the individuals and organizations responsible for financing planning and implementing Cambodia s post election development thought it necessary to ask why the country s economy and society were in such a parlous state The mass graves scattered throughout the countryside provided an obvious explanation The appalling state of the education system many argued could be directly attributed to the fact that among the 1 7 million victims of Pol Pot s holocaust were thousands of students teachers technocrats and intellectuals In this exacting and insightful examination of the crisis in Cambodian education David M Ayres challenges the widespread belief that the key to Cambodia s future development and prosperity lies in overcoming the dreadful legacy of Khmer Rouge He seeks to explain why Cambodia has struggled with an educational crisis for more than four decades including the years before the Khmer Rouge came to power in 1975 and thus casts the net of his analysis well beyond Pol Pot and his accomplices Drawing on an extensive range of sources Ayres clearly shows that Cambodia s educational dilemma the disparity between the education system and the economic political and cultural environments which it should serve can be explained by setting education within its historical and cultural contexts Themes of tradition modernity change and changelessness are linked with culturally entrenched notions of power hierarchy and leadership to clarify why education funding is promised but rarely delivered why schools are built where they are not needed why plans are enthusiastically embraced but never implemented and why contracts and agreements are ignored almost immediately after they are signed Anatomy of a Crisis will be compulsory reading for anyone with an interest in education and development issues as well as Cambodian society culture politics and history Cambridge Business English Dictionary Roz Combley, 2011-11-10 The most up to date business English dictionary created specially for learners of English
