

Operation

The "like new" performance of your new Massey-Ferguson No. 3 Baler can be perpetuated if you, the owner, observe a few basic rules and operating principles. A few reasonable precautions when you receive your No. 3 Baler will aid considerably in the overall life of the machine. Periodic maintenance and adjustment throughout the lifetime of the baler will play an important part in the amount of trouble-free service you can expect to obtain; also, as you become familiar with the normal adjustments in relation to the conditions encountered, you, the operator, can enhance the overall baling operation. Thus the ultimate baler life will be extended eliminating unnecessary "down time" and an uneconomical operation. Follow the suggestions in this section to help you obtain all the performance that was designed and built into your baler.

DESCRIPTION

The No. 3 Baler is a low, compact, automatic pickup baler requiring no manpower to pick up windrowed hay or straw, feed it into the bale chamber, tie the bales and deliver them to a trailing wagon. Optional drives of PTO or engine are used as power sources. PTO drive utilizes a portion of the propelling tractor engine power while the engine drive is an independent power source attached to the baler. The pickup is mounted on the right of the baler and has a throat width of 48 inches. A windguard with torsion spring loaded fingers is used in conjunction with the pickup. This aids in smooth continuous delivery of material to the positive feeding packer fork assemblies. These packer forks feed the material directly from the feed table into the bale chamber placing it in the path of the plunger between strokes. The plunger then shears the new charge of material, moving and compressing it rearward, through the 14 x 18 inch bale chamber. When a sufficient amount of material has passed rearward under the metering wheel, the knottor clutch is tripped, actuating the needles. The needles pass upward through the plunger slots into the knottor assemblies tying the bale with two strands of baler twine. The metering wheel selection predetermines the bale length to be 30 or 38 inches. Continued rearward movement of the bales will place them on the trailing wagon.

Weight of these bales is dependent upon the size of windrow, moisture content, baling speed, material texture and the adjustment of the bale pressure bars. Fifty to sixty lb. bales are an average weight and never should exceed 75-80 lbs. as excessive breakage will result during handling, due to the limits of the twine tensile strength.

When reference is made in this manual, as to direction of travel, or location of baler components it should be remembered that:

- A. The front of the baler is the end where the draw pole is attached.
- B. The rear of the baler is the tailgate

Use "Top Quality" Baler Twine.
