Technologies in Biomedical and Life Sciences Education Harry J. Witchel, Michael W. Lee, 2022-06-24 This contributed volume focuses on understanding the educational strengths and weaknesses of mediated content including media as a learning supplement in comparison to traditional face to face learning Each chapter includes research on and a broad brush summary of approaches to combining life sciences education with educational technologies The chapters are organized into four main sections each of which focuses on a key question regarding the consequences of incorporating media into education In this regard the authors highlight how educational technology is both a bridge and barrier to student access and inclusivity Further they address the ongoing discussion as to whether students need to be present for lectures and on how having agency in their own learning can improve both retention and conceptual understanding To link the content to current events the authors also shed light on the impact that the COVID 19 pandemic is having on the continuity of educational programs and on the growing importance of educational technologies Consequently the book offers life science educators valuable guidance on the technologies already available and an outlook on what is yet to come

Social Studies Education in South and South East Asian Contexts Kerry J Kennedy, 2021-07-22 The education of young people is context bound This edited volume explores the contexts that characterise South and South East Asia and their influence on social studies education There is not a single context across this broad geographical expanse rather different religions different political systems and different values exert influences that create distinctive programmes that characterise different countries Yet there are also commonalities such as the post colonial nature of most of the countries portrayed in this book determined efforts at establishing new national communities and multiple value systems that lead to distinctive local priorities There are also voices of resistance in these chapters recognising the realities of local contexts but also recognising the need for change Social studies education in these contexts may well be descended from its origins in North America but in South and South Asian contexts it has taken on new purposes new forms and new values Education researchers policymakers and postgraduate students in comparative education will find the volume useful in its exploration and comparison of the social studies curricular and reforms that shaped them

Genes, Brains, and Human Potential Ken Richardson, 2017-03-21 For countless generations people have been told that their potential as humans is limited and fundamentally unequal The social order they have been assured is arranged by powers beyond their control More recently the appeal has been to biology specifically the genes brain sciences the concept of intelligence and powerful new technologies Reinforced through the authority of science and a growing belief in bio determinism the ordering of the many for the benefit of a few has become more entrenched Yet scientists are now waking up to the influence of ideology on research and its interpretation In Genes Brains and Human Potential Ken Richardson illustrates how the ideology of human intelligence has infiltrated genetics brain sciences and psychology flourishing in the vagueness of basic concepts a shallow nature versus nurture debate and the overhyped claims of reductionists He shows how ideology more than pure science has come to dominate our institutions especially education encouraging fatalism about the development of human intelligence among individuals and societies Genes Brains and Human Potential goes much further building on work being done in molecular biology epigenetics dynamical systems evolution theory and complexity theory it maps a fresh understanding of intelligence and the development of human potential Concluding with an upbeat message for human possibilities this synthesis of diverse perspectives will engender new conversations among students researchers and other interested readers
