Noam, Darcy Gerbarg, 2014-02-05 This volume features contributions from a conference held in Lusaka Zambia to explore the role and prospects of broadband in Africa as a video platform with emphasis on the strategies and building blocks for deployment and advancement While it may seem that such networks and their applications are not a realistic scenario for developing countries it would be short sighted and economically dangerous to ignore the emerging trends The pace of introduction of next generation networks in industrialized countries is rapid and the developing world will not be able to stand aside The risks of falling behind are great and in any country there will be elements of business and society who wish to forge ahead Policymakers and network architects need to be prepared Media companies and broadcasters in particular must be alert to the new developments as should be medical and educational institutions The availability of advanced high speed business application tools in a country will affect its participation in international transactions and its economic growth This volume features contributions from industry leaders policymakers and scholars representing a variety
