The Cell Cycle - Mitosis

Stages of the Cell Cycle (I - PMAT - C)

Interphase
Interphase has three parts - G₁, S, and G₂. The cell grows during G₁, replicates DNA during S, and prepares for division during G₂.

Mitosis Begins

Prophase
Chromatin condenses into visible chromosomes. In prokaryotes, the nuclear membrane dissolves. Centrioles move to opposite sides. Spindle fibers begin to form.

Metaphase
Chromosomes line up along the cell. Each chromosome sister chromatids. Spindle fibers attach to chromosomes.

Anaphase
Sister chromatids are pulled apart. The pieces are moved to opposite sides of the cell and become sister chromatids.

Telophase
The chromosomes move into chromatin. A new nuclear envelope forms around the two sets of chromosomes.

Cytokinesis

Cell Growth

Most cells are very small, between 1-100 µm in diameter. (For comparison, a strand of human hair is 75 µm in width.) Cells are small because they are limited by their surface area to volume ratio. As a cell grows, its volume increases faster than its surface area. It begins to have difficulty transporting nutrients and waste. By remaining small, cells can manage a more efficient internal transport and communication system. That means that when a cell reaches its size limit, it must either stop growing or divide. The process of growing and dividing is known as the cell cycle.

Why Do Cells Divide?

Cells divide for several reasons. One reason is to replace damaged or dead cells. Another reason is to grow. For example, a wound on your skin is healed by the division of skin cells. Cells also divide to produce new cells that are identical to the parent cell. This is called asexual reproduction. In sexual reproduction, cells combine genetic material from two parents to produce offspring that are genetically different from the parents.
