Human reproduction

Humans reproduce by sexual reproduction involving male and female reproductive cells called gametes. The reproductive system includes organs called gonads that produce gametes and hormones; ducts for transport, storage and composition of gametes; accessory organs and glands for fluid secretion; and internal genitalia. Reproduction is regulated by hormones produced by the gonads, the hypothalamus and the pituitary gland. Fertilisation involves the introduction of sperm into the vagina. The sperm travels through the female reproductive tract until it encounters an ovocyte, a female sex cell. Fertilisation can then take place.

Male reproductive system

The adult male reproductive system is a collection of two primary external structures, the testes and the penis. The testes are divided into thousands of tiny compartments or lobules containing seminiferous tubules, tightly coiled structures where sperm formation takes place.

The testes are situated in a sac called the scrotum called the scrotum, which provides support and regulates the position of the testes relative to the body. The scrotum is located below the testes, near to the body, in external temperature to maintain the proper temperature within the testes for sperm formation.

Seminiferous tubules produce sperm cells for fertilisation. Sperm cells are released into the epididymis, a structure in the scrotum responsible for maturing the sperm and bringing it to the urethra and penile opening. The development of male secondary sex characteristics.

Fertilization

The upper portion of the vagina leads to the vaginal canal for fertilisation. Millions of sperm travel through the female reproductive tract, utilizing cilia, until they reach the egg. Within a sperm, the nucleus contains the genetic material. The sperm travels through the female reproductive tract, utilizing cilia, until they reach the egg. ### Female reproductive system

The internal structure of the adult female reproductive system includes the vagina, uterus, ovaries and fallopian tubes. These structures form a pathway allowing the release of an egg cell, fertilisation, its growth and delivery of a developed fetus. The vagina is a muscular canal that receives the penis during sexual intercourse. It is the lower part of the uterus. It channels through the cervix allows the passage of sperm and menstrual discharge. The uterus is a hollow pear-shaped organ with muscular walls that contract during childbirth. The lower part of the uterus is the cervix, which is the opening into the vagina. During each menstrual cycle, the lining of the uterus is shed, which is the menstrual cycle. This lining is shed during menstruation if fertilisation does not occur.

Spermatozoon

The ovaries, located on each side of the uterus, are responsible for producing ova as well as the female sex hormones estrogen and progesterone. Estrogen is responsible for the development of the female reproductive structures, menstrual characteristics, and breast development. Progesterone prepares the uterus lining for implantation of a fertilized egg and is necessary for breast milk production. The ovaries are connected to the uterus by the ovarian tubes, narrow ducts that provide a passageway for the egg to reach the uterus.

Ovulation phases

Ovulation & the menstrual cycle

The menstrual cycle refers to the sequence of events that occurs in the endometrium, the lining of the uterus. The cycle normally lasts approximately 28 days. The purpose is to prepare the uterus for possible pregnancy. The menstrual cycle is governed by the endocrine system. If fertilisation does not occur, declining estrogen and progesterone levels initiate menstruation and the cycle begins again.

Sex determination

Each parent contributes one sex chromosome. The mother always contributes an X sex chromosome, while the father contributes either an X or a Y sex chromosome. An XX combination produces a girl, while a XY combination produces a boy.
