

student is the copy of someone else's, however many people, like myself, have no idea how to define themselves and are searching for any and all available answers. I may be the only one who deals with a lack of confidence, uncertainty in my identity and a need to appear happy, but I doubt it.

Teenage life however is not solely filled with rebellion and hostility, it is also involves love and unbreakable friendships. In my generation being young is about acting young. We are free to do whatever we want, whenever we want because we make the rules. Teenagers complain about their lack of freedom which I actually believe is completely untrue. We are trusted with later curfews, boyfriends or girlfriends and often at parties our parents are oblivious to. Teenagers today live the good life and yet they will always want more. Every person visualizes, handles, and remembers their teenage years in a very unique way. Most will admit that they struggled to find themselves and that they should have asked for help. What is astonishing about being a teenager is that you always feel undervalued and oppressed. Being a teenager is about rebelling against society and their low expectations; however it is truly the complete opposite. Society is attempting to mould the youth into respectable adults that will one day be the executives, presidents, and workers of the population. Although teenagers feel isolated, alone and underestimated, we can all find comfort in knowing that each of us undergoes this confusing and crucial transition into adulthood.
