

HARD, DRY PELLETS

This poop is difficult for your dog to expel and is often a sign of insufficient water or may indicate too little (or too much!) fiber. If this type of poop hangs around for more than a couple of days, assess your dog's diet and speak to your veterinarian.

FIRM, MOIST LOG

FIRM, MOIST, BROKEN LOG

The 'Top Dog' of poops!

This is what normal, healthy poop looks like. Keep doing whatever you're doing.

WHAT IS YOUR DOG'S POOP TELLING YOU?

FIRM, THEN SLOPPY

If part of your dog's poop is firm but the other part is sloppy, this could be a sign of IBS. If this persists, contact your veterinarian.

SOFT, SOGGY LOG

This can be a sign of a highly-processed diet, lacking fiber, and not being properly digested in your dog's tummy.

WATERY DIARRHOEA

The same as 'Diarrhoea', but should be monitored even closer due to the risk of dehydration. If you are concerned or this persists for longer than 12 hours, see your veterinarian ASAP.

DIARRHOEA

This poop can often be a sign of stress or that your dog may have eaten something that's upsetting their tummy and made them feel unwell. If this persists for longer than 12 hours, see your veterinarian ASAP.

SLOPPY PILE

The same as 'Soggy Log', just looser poops as a result! Often the same cause.
