

The collage features several hand-drawn diagrams and notes explaining nuclear fission. One diagram shows a neutron hitting a Uranium-235 nucleus, which then splits into two fission products (like Barium and Krypton) and releases energy and more neutrons. Handwritten notes include 'The separated particles weigh less than the resulting nuclear mass', 'The difference in the mass is called the mass defect', and the equation  $E=mc^2$ . There are also drawings of a balance scale and a person thinking.

Nuclear Fusion and Fission Fiona Young-Brown,2016-07-15 Nuclear Fusion and Fission delves into nuclear physics and the scientists responsible for the discovery of splitting and fusing an atom The book begins with the very basic building blocks of science breaking down the different types of energy and how we use them the materials that make up an atom and our search for the perfect renewable energy source Set against the cultural backdrop of World War II later chapters follow each significant theory that led to the creation of the world s most dangerous weapon as well as some of its most widely used medical and food production processes today      Fission, Fusion and the Energy Crisis Stanley Ernest Hunt,1974

Fission and Fusion Lifelique,2019 This lesson plan covers nuclear fission and nuclear fusion      Cold Nuclear Fusion Florian Ion Petrescu,2012-07-01 Nuclear fusion is the process by which two or more atomic nuclei join together or fuse to form a single heavier nucleus During this process matter is not conserved because some of the mass of the fusing nuclei is converted to energy which is released The binding energy of the resulting nucleus is greater than the binding energy of each of the nuclei that fused to produce it Fusion is the process that powers active stars Creating the required conditions for fusion on Earth is very difficult to the point that it has not been accomplished at any scale for protium the common light isotope of hydrogen that undergoes natural fusion in stars In nuclear weapons some of the energy released by an atomic bomb fission bomb is used for compressing and heating a fusion fuel containing heavier isotopes of hydrogen and also sometimes lithium to the point of ignition At this point the energy released in the fusion reactions is enough to briefly maintain the reaction Fusion based nuclear power experiments attempt to create similar conditions using far lesser means although to date these experiments have failed to maintain conditions needed for ignition long enough for fusion to be a viable commercial power source There are many experiments examining the possibility of fusion power for electrical generation Nuclear fusion has great potential as a sustainable energy source This is due to the abundance of hydrogen on the planet and the inert nature of helium the nucleus which would result from the nuclear fusion of hydrogen atoms Unfortunately a controlled nuclear fusion reaction has not yet been achieved due to the temperatures required to sustain one In hot fusion it need a temperature of 4000 million degrees Without a minimum of 3000 million degrees we can t make the hot fusion reaction to obtain the nuclear power Today we have just 150 million degrees made To replace the lack of necessary temperature it uses various tricks Because obtaining the necessary huge temperature for hot fusion is still difficult it is time to focus us on cold nuclear fusion We need to bomb the fuel with accelerated deuterium nuclei The fuel will be made from heavy water and lithium The optimal proportion of lithium will be tested It would be preferable to keep fuel in the plasma state Research into developing controlled thermonuclear fusion for civil purposes also began in earnest in the 1950s and it continues to this day Two projects the National Ignition Facility and ITER are in the process of reaching breakeven after 60 years of design improvements developed from previous experiments The best results were obtained with the Tokamak type installations

The Curve of Binding Energy Paul F. Kisak,2016-05-31 Nuclear binding energy is the energy that would be required to disassemble the nucleus of an atom into its component parts These component parts are neutrons and protons which are collectively called nucleons The binding energy of nuclei is due to the attractive forces that hold these nucleons together and this is usually a positive number since most nuclei would require the expenditure of energy to separate them into individual protons and neutrons The mass of an atomic nucleus is usually less than the sum of the individual masses of the constituent protons and neutrons according to Einstein s equation  $E = mc^2$  and this missing mass is known as the mass defect and represents the energy that was released when the nucleus was formed The term nuclear binding energy may also refer to the energy balance in processes in which the nucleus splits into fragments composed of more than one nucleon If new binding energy is available when light nuclei fuse or when heavy nuclei split either process can result in release of this binding energy This energy may be made available as nuclear energy and can be used to produce electricity as in nuclear power or in a nuclear weapon When a large nucleus splits into pieces excess energy is emitted as photons gamma rays and as the kinetic energy of a number of different ejected particles nuclear fission products The nuclear binding energies and forces are on the order of a million times greater than the electron binding energies of light atoms like hydrogen The mass defect of a nucleus represents the mass of the energy of binding of the nucleus and is the difference between the mass of a nucleus and the sum of the masses of the nucleons of which it is composed
