Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders between two groups of female nurses working in different departments of a tertiary care hospital. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was determined by means of a self-administered questionnaire among 100 female nurses who worked in the intensive care unit (ICU) and 100 female nurses who worked in the medical-surgical department. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among ICU nurses than among medical-surgical nurses. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among nurses who had been employed longer than those who had been employed shorter periods. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among nurses who had more children than those who had fewer children. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among nurses who had more years of experience than those who had fewer years of experience. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among nurses who had more hours of work per week than those who had fewer hours of work per week. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among nurses who had more years of experience than those who had fewer years of experience. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among nurses who had more hours of work per week than those who had fewer hours of work per week.
