1. What are the characters in Mother Tongue?
A. My Mom and her mother.
B. What is the main subject of the passage?
A. my mother's struggle with English as a second language and how she copes with learning a second language.
B. What does Mom Tiao, as called, have to do with her mother?
She would have to pretend as if her mother was a first person because people wouldn't take her seriously.
A. How did her mother feel about being Tiao's mom after she died?
She struggled to see "her mother as a dad".
B. What could possibly happen for her this year?
She is going to finally be a mother.
A. What point is the author making with the example of her mother and the English?
She is making a point that even though she was never being Tiao's mother, she was her mother when her dad "passed". English and other languages don't go away when you learn a second language, so she had to be Tiao's mom, which is what she did.
B. What point is the author making with the example of the schoolyard?
She knows that even if she was a second language speaker, people would take advantage of her and even use that as a way to say that she was a first person. They got to the point, so she had to be Tiao's mom.
B. The author also explains that there is a person's "developing language skills are more influenced by genes," yet she thinks that family is more influential. "Especially in Asian-American families." Everyone thinks family is powerful, more influential, as a person's language?
I think definitely family is more powerful than language, even though the author says that language is more powerful than family. This is because she is saying that language is more powerful than family.
