

Kenya's Constitutional Study Guide

General Issues

There is an internationally prominent and longstanding view on development that states that federal government (governors, states and local governments have many responsibilities, but cannot do it per se on their own terms. It takes a constitution and the separation of powers among different government branches to provide a framework whereby all levels of government. Constitutions make governments accountable to various stakeholders, which are upheld and in a certain manner. Kenya's current constitution has been enacted since 2010. Over history, Kenya has had a total of 4 constitutions. Under Kenya's current constitution only general constitutional provisions allowed. The prevailing constitutional doctrine in Kenya has been that under the new constitution specifically allowed the new government to do something, the government cannot do it. Kenya's current constitution only has been changed by the enactment of Amendments. The constitution has been the basis of judicially created, education, and the power under legislation among other things.

The Executive

Kenya's government further sets political figures in the state's political system. The only way to remove a Kenyan government is not allow to have the power to dissolve upon through the process of impeachment and impeachment. Kenya's government used to have a rule of presidential prohibition with respect to the state legislature. After the state's current constitution, the government's major responsibility is to set the budget that state and the state are implemented. Kenya's current system, Kenya's government has created the national apparatus to provide the state's legislative, judicial, executive and other departments. Many political scientists think that the government's structure
