Fardis,2013-08-15 In the past facilities considered to be at the end of their useful life were demolished and replaced with new ones that better met the functional requirements of modern society including new safety standards Humankind has recently recognised the threats to the environment and to our limited natural resources due to our relentless determination to destroy the old and build anew With the awareness of these constraints and the emphasis on sustainability in future the majority of old structures will be retrofitted to extend their service life as long as feasible In keeping with this new approach the EU s Construction Products Regulation 305 2011 which is the basis of the Eurocodes included the sustainable use of resources as an Essential Requirement for construction So the forthcoming second generation of EN Eurocodes will cover not only the design of new structures but the rehabilitation of existing ones as well Most of the existing building stock and civil infrastructures are seismically deficient When the time comes for a decision to prolong their service life with the help of structural and architectural upgrading seismic retrofitting may be needed Further it is often decided to enhance the earthquake resistance of facilities that still meet their functional requirements and fulfil their purpose if they are not earthquake safe In order to decide how badly a structure needs seismic upgrading or to prioritise it in a population of structures a seismic evaluation is needed which also serves as a guide for the extent and type of strengthening Seismic codes do not sufficiently cover the delicate phase of seismic evaluation nor the many potential technical options for seismic upgrading therefore research is on going and the state of the art is constantly evolving All the more so as seismic evaluation and rehabilitation demand considerable expertise to make best use of the available safety margins in the existing structure to adapt the engineering capabilities and techniques at hand to the particularities of a project to minimise disruption of use etc Further as old structures are very diverse in terms of their materials and layout seismic retrofitting does not lend itself to straightforward codified procedures or cook book approaches As such seismic evaluation and rehabilitation need the best that the current state of the art can offer on all aspects of earthquake engineering This volume serves this need as it gathers the most recent research of top seismic experts from around the world on seismic evaluation retrofitting and closely related subjects
