
Student: Exploration: Rock Cycle

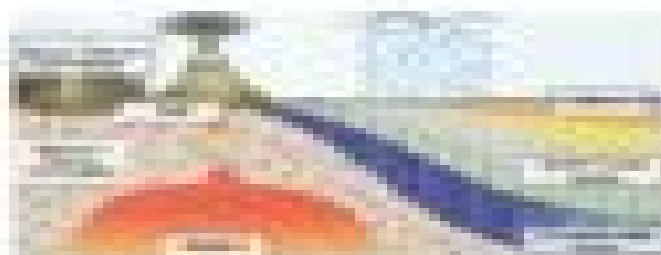

Abstract The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, supervised, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women. The program was designed to be safe and enjoyable for this population. The program was supervised by a physical therapist and a personal trainer. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The program included a warm-up, a cardiovascular workout, a resistance training workout, and a cool-down. The authors found that the program significantly improved the women's physical fitness and health-related quality of life. The program was well-tolerated and enjoyed by the women. The authors conclude that a supervised, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program is a safe and effective way to improve the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women.

The absorption is weak in the visible region.
