Expository Discourse Beverly Lewin, Jonathan Fine, Lynne Young, 2005-11-17 The description of the social science research genre is important both for those teaching English to speakers and readers of other languages and for researchers in discourse structure For teachers the detailed analysis of texts and the method for determining realization rules will help in guiding students who must understand and produce research articles For researchers the qualitative and quantitative analyses show how the different levels of abstraction from the genre itself to its moves acts and wordings are related to each other Lastly this analysis can serve as a model for future descriptions of other academic and professional genres

BOOK JACKET

Dialogue, Science and Academic Writing Zohar Livnat, 2012-01-11 This book investigates the dialogic nature of research articles from the perspective of discourse analysis based on theories of dialogicity It proposes a theoretical and applied framework for the understanding and exploration of scientific dialogicity Focusing on some dialogic components among them citations concession inclusive we and interrogatives a combined model of scientific dialogicity is proposed that reflects the place and role of various linguistic structures against the background of various theoretical approaches to dialogicity Taking this combined model as a basis the analysis demonstrates how scientific dialogicity is realized in an actual scientific dispute and how a scientific project is constructed step by step by means of a dialogue with its readers and discourse community A number of different patterns of scientific dialogicity are offered characterized by the different levels of the polemic held with the research world and other specific researchers from the classic moderate and polite dialogicity to a direct and personal confrontation between scientists communication the history and evolution of scientific language and translation of scientific texts Constructing Interpersonality Enrique Lafuente-Millán, Rosa Lorés-Sanz, Pilar Mur-Dueñas, 2010-02-19 The view that academic discourse is by definition impersonal has long been superseded. It seems unquestionable now that the interpersonal component of texts – that is, the ways in which the writers project themselves and their audience in the discourse – is an essential factor determining the success of scholarly communication and has become a fundamental issue in the field of English for Academic Purposes (EAP). Interpersonality is the key issue around which the articles in this edited book focus on. The eighteen contributions included in this volume provide a wide exploratory view of the many academic genres in which interpersonal communication is manifested and the various analytical approaches from which the textual manifestation of that interpersonal communication can be studied. The varied origin of the contributors is also representative of the global interest that the issue of interpersonal communication arouses in the field of academic discourse analysis at an international level. The present volume constitutes a highly valuable tool for applied linguists and discourse analysts with an interest in EAP as well as for students, instructors and language teachers interested in academic discourse. The book may also be of interest to other agents intervening in the research publication process such as translators, proofreaders, reviewers and editors.

Investigating English Legal Genres in Academic and Professional Contexts Girolamo Tessuto, 2013-01-11 This volume contributes to the latest studies in legal discourse studies by presenting a descriptive and interpretive analysis of English legal genres used in academic and professional writing contexts. The results of corpora-driven data are discussed through meta-discourse genre and other theoretical perspectives and offer insights into the ways the writers' discursive practices and meanings shape their membership of the legal community and discipline. The volume attempts to show these things.
