India Balkan Economic History, 1550-1950 John R. Lampe, Marvin R. Jackson, 1982-06-22 Western economic historians have traditionally concentrated on the success stories of major developed economies while development economists have given most of their attention to the problems of the Third World. The authors of this pioneering work study a part of Europe neglected by both approaches. Modernizing patterns in Balkan economic history are traced from the sixteenth century when the territory was shared by Ottoman and Habsburg empires through the nineteenth century when they emerged as independent states to the end of World War II and its aftermath. Despite present differences in economic systems Greece's private market economy, Yugoslavia's planned market economy and the centrally planned economies of Romania, Bulgaria and Albania, the authors find that shared origins and common subsequent experiences are ample justifications for treating the area as an economic unit. Balkan Economic History 1550-1950 will be a major case study for development economists and will provide historians with the first analytical and statistical study to survey the entire region from the start of the early modern period. The Contemporary Review, 1922 The Wisconsin Agriculturist, 1915 The Growth of the Modern West Indies Gordon K. Lewis, 2004 Provides an in-depth analysis of the forces that contributed to the shaping of the West Indian society covering the crucial inter-war years from the 1920s to the period of the 1960s Standards and Their Stories Martha Lampland, Susan Leigh Star, 2009 Standardization is one of the defining aspects of modern life; its presence so pervasive that it is usually taken for granted. However, cumbersome, onerous or simply puzzling, certain standards may be their fundamental purpose in streamlining procedures, regulating behaviors and predicting results is rarely questioned. Indeed, the invisibility of infrastructure and the imperative of standardizing processes signify their absolute necessity. Increasingly, however, social scientists are beginning to examine the origins and effects of the standards that underpin the technology and practices of everyday life. Standards and Their Stories explores how we interact with the network of standards that shape our lives in ways both obvious and invisible. The main chapters analyze standardization in biomedical research, government bureaucracies, the insurance industry, labor markets and computer technology, providing detailed accounts of the invention of standard humans for medical testing and life insurance, actuarial tables, the imposition of chronological age as a biographical determinant, the accepted means of determining labor productivity, the creation of international standards for the preservation and access of metadata and the global consequences of ASCII imperialism and the use of English as the lingua franca of the Internet. Accompanying these in-depth critiques are a series of examples that depict an almost infinite variety of standards, from the controversies surrounding the European Union's supposed regulation of banana curvature to the minimum health requirements for immigrants at Ellis Island, conflicting and ever-increasing food portion sizes and the impact of standardized punishment metrics like Three Strikes laws. The volume begins with a pioneering essay from Susan Leigh Star and Martha Lampland on the nature of standards in everyday life that brings together strands from the several fields represented in the book. In an appendix, the editors provide a guide for teaching courses in this emerging interdisciplinary field which they term infrastructure studies making Standards and Their Stories ideal for scholars students and those curious about why coffins are becoming wider for instance or why the Financial Accounting Standards Board refused to classify September 11 as an extraordinary event
