The concept of personality is one of the central topics in psychology and psychoanalysis. There are several scientific theories that characterize the process of the personality development. The understanding of this process is a crucial factor in the children upbringing and education of people.

The aim of this essay is to define the concept of personality, give its theoretical explanation and analyze factors influencing the process of the personality development.

There are different views on the concept of personality and, as a result, different scholars interpret the concept in their own way. For instance, Allport defined it as "a dynamic organization, inside the person, of psychophysical systems that create the person's characteristic patterns of behavior, thoughts and feelings" (Personality, n.d., p. 294).

Other scholars concentrated their attention on the additional features of personality. For example, Child insisted on the importance of the consistency and difference of behavior in definition of personality (Personality, n.d.). One of the broadest definitions is given below.

"Personality is an individual's unique variation on the general evolutionary design for human nature, expressed as a developing pattern of dispositional traits, characteristic adaptations, and integrative life stories complexly and differentially situated in culture" (Personality development, n.d., par. 5).

There are several basic theories explaining the concept of personality. The first one belongs to Sigmund Freud, a famous Austrian psychoanalyst. Freud defines the personality as the union of three integral parts which are "Ego", "Id", and "Super-Ego". The first component relates to our past experience, our bad memories, which can be both conscious and unconscious. The "Id" is our inner perception of ourselves.

And the "Super-Ego" is what the environment contributes to our personality. In addition, Freud argues that "Ego" and "Super-Ego" exist in the continuous fight against each other, but "Id" tries to find a compromise in their struggle. It is the compromise between our personal satisfaction and moral norms. Overall, Freud's approach to

Sociology: A Systematic Introduction Harry M. Johnson, 1966-07-12

Harry M. Johnson's Sociology: A Systematic Introduction stands as a landmark in sociological education, blending scholarly rigor with accessibility. Echoing Donald Fleming's ideal of a textbook that channels consensus without stifling innovation, Johnson's book offers a coherent yet flexible account of core sociological principles. It is both a manual for students and a treatise that contributes meaningfully to the discipline. Rather than impose a rigid framework, Johnson draws upon a working consensus in sociology, often associated with structural functionalism, while avoiding theoretical dogmatism. He integrates a wide range of empirical evidence from diverse sources, including anthropology, political science, and economics, without ever losing focus on sociological relevance. This is not a superficial or oversimplified text. Instead, Johnson invites readers to think critically, offering a balanced blend of theoretical insight and empirical depth. He presents complex topics like ideology, authority, and bureaucracy with clarity and substance. The annotated bibliographies at the end of each chapter further enrich the text, guiding students toward deeper inquiry. While demanding intellectual effort, the book rewards it with understanding, not rote memorization. Johnson's lucid and graceful writing elevates the student's learning experience, making the book an enduring educational resource. It is a textbook that teaches and inspires by example, preparing students for advanced study and independent sociological thought.

This book constitutes late breaking papers from the 22nd International Conference on Human Computer Interaction (HCII 2020) which was held in July 2020. The conference was planned to take place in Copenhagen, Denmark, but had to change to a virtual conference mode due to the COVID-19 pandemic. From a total of 6326 submissions, a total of 1439 papers and 238 posters have been accepted for publication in the HCII 2020 proceedings before the conference took place. In addition, a total of 333 papers and 144 posters are included in the volumes of the proceedings published after the conference as Late Breaking Work papers and posters. These contributions address the latest research and development efforts in the field and highlight the human aspects of design and use of computing systems.
