

PART I

Theories and Approaches in International Development

The seven chapters in Part I, Theories and Approaches in International Development, introduce the student to key concepts, historical contexts of development thinking and action, and theoretical approaches. The purpose of this section is to provide the student with a foundational conceptual toolkit for understanding international development.

International development is a normative discipline that is concerned with promoting a particular outcome—economic and human development—even if that outcome is contested. The section begins with a chapter that explicitly addresses this issue: Jessica Schafer, Paul Haslam and Pierre Beaudet's "What Is Development?" (Chapter 1). The authors aim to introduce students to the way the concept of development has changed since it was formalized in the post-World War II period by examining both the history of the idea and the foundational concepts of growth, inequality, and poverty. The culmination of this process is the recognition that development is multi-dimensional, as exemplified by Amartya Sen's human development paradigm and operationalized in the Sustainable Development Goals. The chapter also introduces students to development ethics and encourages them to consider the ethical implications of their actions as exchange students, interns, budding researchers, and development practitioners.

Eric Allina's "Imperialism and the Colonial Experience" (Chapter 2) provides historical context for understanding international development. Allina addresses the complex and varied logics of colonialism in the different areas of the developing world, and his analysis offers great insight into both the motivations of the imperial powers and how imperialism was experienced locally, including the struggle for independence in the postwar period. At the same time, he is careful to identify commonalities in the colonial experience that have direct application to the contemporary problems of development covered in other chapters.

Pablo Heidrich's "Theories of Development Economics" (Chapter 3), Susan Spronk and Jody-Ann Anderson's "The Critical Political Economy of Development" (Chapter 4), and Aram Ziai's "Post-development and Alternatives to Development" (Chapter 5) explain the most important over-arching theoretical frameworks used to understand international development. Recognizing the limited theoretical objectives of most first- and second-year undergraduate courses, these chapters aim to identify key thinkers and concepts, placing the latter within a history of ideas that explains their evolution and transformation over time.

Chapter 3 introduces students to "mainstream" approaches to growth and economic development, beginning with the classical approaches to development that emerged during the Industrial Revolution, followed by Keynesianism, development economics and modernization theory, the rise of monetarist or neoliberal approaches, and the recent hegemony of institutional economics. Chapter 4 provides a counterpoint to Chapter 3, addressing critical approaches to development that are based in Marxist and Marxist-inspired political economy. Spronk and Anderson ground their discussion of critical political economy in a common concern over inequality. They explain the foundational concepts of Marxist political economy and their iteration in the classic analysis of imperialism and dependency, as well as influential post-Marxist thinking with contemporary resonance, such as David Harvey's accumulation by dispossession, and the intersectionality of class, race, and gender.

Chapter 5 provides the theoretical and conceptual apparatus necessary to understand more fundamental critiques of development coming from post-development thinkers. In this chapter, Ziai explains the origins of post-development and discusses key thinkers and their conceptual contributions (for example, on discourse) in historical context. Ziai also links post-development
