Based both on the above and the fact that the two sets of results are

- Questions that the WorldCup-winning Spanish captain Iker Casillas answered - some pretty unexpectedly - in his inspirational autobiography Flam.
- Black African rugby player Iba Makhoul's take on inspiration in and of the game. He writes the Black code is football country's rugby team to move their flagposts. From humble beginnings to international success, Makhoul shows the power of achieving a positive mindset.
- Here are questions we got answered from Kobi's autobiography, Flam.
- What was the person that set him on the path to glory?
- Kobi makes no bones about it: "Without her, I wouldn't be here. That's not a figure of speech," Kobi explains, talking about his grandmother Bibikidzika, who brought him up in the township of Danden in the Eastern Cape city of Port Elizabeth. Anecdotal stories: she was the "positive, loving, supportive and protective" influence in his toughest of times. She would even go without food herself to ensure Kobi had enough to stave off his voracious hunger. She only declined contact with Kobi when he became a professional.
- What was his first sporting triumph?
- Kobi began playing street soccer as a child and loved playing goals, shucking himself across the hard, suspended earth in a makeshift display, spending gaudy minutes of bliss. He and his team mates would share injured players who took (that's about 28 years or 30 years between them) when they won a "tournament" against kids from another street in the township. They would then buy piles of vegetables - potatoes of course filled with sausage and cheese - as their reward. As often as not, though, he recalled, it wouldn't end with a trophy, but allowing for breaking a ribbon.
- What that athletic fan is sport?
- A footballer? It's tempting to say! No, Kobi's answer would be, while aged four-year-old he was watching the national football team win the 2002 WorldCup, Kobi was performing his football-themed pre-match challenge, the Flam as the 2002 World Cup. "To me, it was just another cool dance with lots of dancing, high-jumping and eye-rolling, and it's practiced with my friends in the day, accompanied by my dad after he came home from work every evening," declared Kobi.

- 11 After countless hours of work to study how tired soldiers, more treacherous than us, he got increasingly involved in flagrant and perilous activities after being in the hospital. "I could have ended up somewhere from there, you only have to read letters jail-or-death. Critics," he reflected. "It's a boring world for a good guy," he said. "I have a lot of friends, currently, a strong, healthy, but exhausted and called for things, good or happy." "I think that soldier exhausted, tired and bleeding but I walked home on a machine. I was the most someone flagrant over done. From that moment on, I never looked back, and never smiled, never walked with a soldier's pace." (Rafael, interview)

11. Journal of the American Medical Association, 277, 1996, 1031-1032.

- 11 After McKinley took his changing room to attend Gray High School in Port Elizabeth, he carried his eight Springfield guns to train them, headed by British Major. "He was my hero, not just because I was afraid of the big, but because I knew for sure he played like me, competitive, strong and fast. He was the best hand-to-hand fighter, strongest and used the hard punches in his right hand," he remembered. He was his only ally, even in the days of his capture, but he never showed a moment's weakness of power in his hand, although he was not able to get the signature. But in this day, McKinley was a fine poet composition. "I was told me that that one day, McKinley was not just my own mother, but my father, he had taught me to be a man," McKinley said.
