of papers that have been contributed by systems thinkers from around the world. As with previous UKSS conferences the aim of this conference is to encourage debate and promote development of pertinent issues in systems theory and practice. In current times where the focus has moved from information to knowledge and where knowledge management of everyday speak it seemed fitting to knowledge assets and so on have become part of a conference title of Systems Theory and Practice in the Knowledge Age. In keeping with another tradition of previous conferences the UKSS Conference 2002 Committee decided to compile a collection of delegates' papers before the event as a platform from which to launch discussions in York. Ideas presented in the following papers will undoubtedly be developed during the dialogue generated at the conference and new papers will emerge. In his abstract for his plenary at this conference Professor Peter Checkland throws down the gauntlet to systems thinking and its relevance in the knowledge age with the following statement: 30 Years In The Systems Movement: Disappointments I Have Known and Hopes for the Future. Springing from a lunchtime conversation at an American University the Systems Movement is now nearly 50 years old.

Analysis and Design of Next-Generation Software Architectures Arthur M. Langer, 2020-01-02. This book provides a detailed how-to guide addressing aspects ranging from analysis and design to the implementation of applications which need to be integrated within legacy applications and databases. The analysis and design of the next generation of software architectures must address the new requirements to accommodate the Internet of things, IoT, cybersecurity, blockchain networks, cloud and quantum computer technologies. As 5G wireless increasingly establishes itself over the next few years, moving legacy applications into these new architectures will be critical for companies to compete in a consumer-driven and social media-based economy. Few organizations, however, understand the challenges and complexities of moving from a central database legacy architecture to a ledger and networked environment. The challenge is not limited to just designing new software applications. Indeed, the next generation needs to function more independently on various devices and on more diverse and wireless-centric networks. Furthermore, databases must be broken down into linked list-based blockchain architectures which will involve analytic decisions regarding which portions of data and metadata will be processed within the chain and which ones will be dependent on cloud systems. Finally, the collection of all data throughout these vast networks will need to be aggregated and used for predictive analysis across a variety of competitive business applications in a secured environment. Certainly not an easy task for any analyst or designer. Many organizations will continue to use packaged products and open source applications. These third-party products will need to be integrated into the new architecture paradigms and have seamless data aggregation capabilities while maintaining the necessary cyber compliances. The book also clearly defines the roles and responsibilities of the stakeholders involved, including the IT departments, users, executive sponsors, and third-party vendors. The book's structure also provides a step-by-step method to help ensure a higher rate of success in the context of re-engineering existing applications and databases as well as selecting third-party products, conversion methods, and
