Science Teaching in Schools Great Britain: Parliament: House of Lords: Science and Technology Committee, 2006-11-05 The Committee's report examines science and mathematics teaching in secondary schools in England focusing on the following issues the take up of science and mathematics at GCSE and A level the provision of careers advice to students problems in the recruitment and retention of teachers the quality of teaching methods and the role of continuing professional development The Committee finds that effective science teaching in schools is essential both in order to ensure a satisfactory general level of scientific literacy in society and to enable the next generation of scientists and engineers to progress into higher education and beyond It argues that the current examination system forces students to study an excessively narrow range of subjects at too early an age and it recommends that the Government should reconsider the Tomlinson proposals for a broader diploma based system for 14-19 year old students based on the International Baccalaureate This would ensure that students receive a more rounded education and are not made to over specialise before they are able to see the merits of studying science and mathematics Concerns are also raised about the shortage of science teachers particularly specialist physics and chemistry teachers the quality of careers advice in schools and the importance of practical science in schools

Mathematics for Life and Work A Comparative Perspective on Mathematics to Inform Upper Secondary Reform in England OECD, 2024-11-05 Engagement and performance in mathematics at the upper secondary level have been the concern of successive governments in England This report was commissioned as part of the country's policy reflections for transforming how maths is viewed and experienced in England The report explores outcomes such as the share of students studying maths and performance across countries and how education systems internationally deliver mathematics in upper secondary It also examines factors shaping maths education including the expectations set by curricula student pathways cultural perceptions and the needs of the labour market and higher education
