

LAB TOPIC 3A

Structure and Function of Living Cells

Adapted from: Pong, William, and Steve. Laboratory Manual for General Biology (2nd Edition).

Laboratory Objectives

After completing this structure, you will be able to:

1. Identify cell, cell theory, prokaryotic, eukaryotic, nucleus, cytoplasmic stream, organelle, mitochondrion, cytoplasmic streaming, and pH, osmotic pressure.
2. List three essential elements shared by all cells.
3. Explain the similarities and differences between prokaryotic and eukaryotic cells.
4. Identify the cell parts described in this structure.
5. State the function for three cell parts.
6. Classify cells according to their shape and animal cells.
7. Diagram the organization presented in this lab in the proper sequence.

Introduction

Structurally and functionally, all life has some common features. All living organisms are composed of cells. The development of life begins with simple molecules. These molecules combine to form cells and cells work together to form small units. The smallest units called "cells" however their structure extended from the small molecules that make them to form the cells. In fact, the cell theory suggests that there are three parts to the cell theory. The cell theory states that all organisms are composed of one or more cells, [1] the cell is the basic unit of organization, and [2] all cells arise from preexisting cells.

Although cells vary in organization, size, and function, all share some common features. [1] All possess a plasma membrane defining the boundary of the living material. [2] All contain a region of DNA, cytoplasmic streaming, and a nucleus. Some possess mitochondria, and [3] all possess cytoplasm, everything within the plasma membrane that is not part of the nucleus.
