shows in his narrative and recipes the principal theme in the story of food during the two centuries is the rapid spread of French fine cooking throughout Europe and its gradual percolation down the social scale. However, despite the domination of French cuisine at higher levels, most nations managed to cling proudly to their own indigenous traditions. A lively introduction explains the dramatic shift in culinary taste led by the exuberant creativity of French cooks. Cookbooks started to emerge from the Paris printing presses after a hundred years of silence. Numerous innovations completely transformed French cuisine and swept away all remnants of lingering medieval taste. There were new efficient cooking techniques for the kitchens of powerful and wealthy. For all there were new ingredients from New World and new cooking mediums such as the mechanical spit and roasting ranges that made cooking cleaner and less back-breaking. The recipes, each with a short explanation, are organized by type of dish. Categories include salads and cold dishes, soups, meat, poultry, fish, and seafood, vegetables, and fungi, eggs, and dairy, sauces, savory pastries, starches, pastas, and legumes, breads, and cakes, sweet pastries, and puddings, fruit, nuts, and flower preserves, sweets, and confections, jellies, and ices, and drinks. Occasional sidebars offer period menus of, for example, elaborate feasts. A glossary and an appendix listing suppliers of equipment and ingredients are added features.

Renaissance Food from Rabelais to Shakespeare Joan Fitzpatrick, 2016-04-08. Providing a unique perspective on a fascinating aspect of early modern culture, this volume focuses on the role of food and diet as represented in the works of a range of European authors, including Shakespeare, from the late medieval period to the mid-seventeenth century. The volume is divided into several sections, the first of which is Eating in Early Modern Europe; contributors consider cultural formations and cultural contexts for early modern attitudes to food and diet, moving from the more general consideration of European and English manners to the particular consideration of historical attitudes toward specific foodstuffs. The second section is Early Modern Cookbooks and Recipes, which takes readers into the kitchen and considers the development of the cultural artifact we now recognize as the cookbook, how early modern recipes might work today, and whether cookery books specifically aimed at women might have shaped domestic creativity. Part Three, Food and Feeding in Early Modern Literature, offers analysis of the engagement with food and feeding in key literary European and English texts from the early sixteenth to the early seventeenth century: Françoise Rabelais's Quart livre, Shakespeare's plays, and seventeenth-century dramatic prologues. The essays included in this collection are international and interdisciplinary in their approach; they incorporate the perspectives of historians, cultural commentators, and literary critics who are leaders in the field of food and diet in early modern culture
