Nutrition among Vulnerable Populations

Heather Eicher-Miller, Marie Kainoa Fialkowski Revilla, 2020-11-27 Food insecurity and low resources continue to be a burden influencing the health, well being, growth and development of millions of U.S. children and adults. Groups and individuals experiencing restrained access to food are our neighbors, individuals we may see each day and individuals who we may not interact with or see because of their isolated situations. They include the elderly, those experiencing mental illness, veterans, certain race/ethnic groups, adolescents, young women with children, those living in rural areas and those using food pantries among others. Many of these groups, both hidden and visible, have rates of food insecurity above the national average that are resistant to national improvements in food security. Yet attention to these subsets of the population is imperative to improve U.S. health and nutrition and to reduce rates of chronic disease. Many groups face specific barriers to maintaining sufficient food. For example, rural populations may find it difficult to access federal food assistance or other resources such as food pantries and nutrition education because of distance or lack of consistent internet access separating them from these resources. Further, their remote locations may make it difficult to obtain the types of foods that they prefer. Other specific barriers may include limited facilities and equipment for food preparation, access to culturally appropriate foods and preparation supplies, and foods that complement the foods that they already have. Tailored approaches to quantify access to food, the nutrition environment, dietary intake and other barriers are necessary to build successful interventions and to quantify the needs of these populations.

The State of Food Insecurity in Johannesburg Rudolph, Michael, Kroll, Florian, 2016-10-17 Johannesburg is the economic hub of South Africa and the Southern African region At the same time it is a city of extremes which juxtaposes ostentatious wealth and conspicuous consumption with grinding poverty and food insecurity Not enough is known about the prevalence and nature of food insecurity in the city making it difficult to challenge and plan to reduce the urban food gap This paper uses AFSUN data from three lower income areas of the city Alexandra Orange Farm and the Inner City to examine the characteristics and drivers of food insecurity in Johannesburg Despite high overall levels of food insecurity the three study areas exhibited important differences While the proportion of food secure households was similar in each area the proportion of severely food insecure households was highest in the informal settlement of Orange Farm and lowest in Alexandra Household food insecurity is directly linked to household income as the vast majority of food consumed is purchased not grown In general the poorer the household the greater the proportion of household income that is spent on food Households rely significantly on supermarkets and the informal food economy as food sources Less than ten percent are involved in any form of urban agriculture or receive food transfers directly from rural areas This paper also shows that food insecurity correlates with poor health outcomes and concludes with a discussion of the policy implications of the AFSUN study
