Write Like a Sumerian!

Cuneiform is noted as the oldest form of writing. Symbols were developed in Mesopotamia as a method of communication. Symbols included a combination of pictographs, symbols representing an entire word, and phonograms (symbols representing a syllable or sound). Early Sumerian writing began as a pictographic system with simple pictures and symbols, which represented a whole word or idea. Sumerians developed pictures of objects and animals to represent the words. Symbols for numbers, names, and other words such as writing and working were represented with abstract symbols. This was a revolutionary development because it allowed a more sophisticated writing system. The evolution of the pictorial system of writing provided a more abstract idea, symbols representing sounds, instead of whole ideas. The symbol for water could be used to represent the word "water" because the two words sounded alike. This is the same concept as the alphabet used today. The Cuneiform system of writing developed over a period of 100 years and eventually grew into a complex system. By 3000 B.C., the Sumerians had developed a complete system of writing.

Cuneiform was used when carved into clay tablets with fluted lines. Tablets were used to keep records or they were inscribed with pictures. Many of the clay tablets found in Mesopotamia were used as a record of business transactions. They were often used as a record of business transactions. They were often used as a record of business transactions.
