

CELL BIOLOGY TERM PAPER:

Topic: Choose a topic you thing is really interesting to you professionally and a topic that is specific to a cell, something in a cell or something on a cell. Your term paper should be a significant project, you will spend quite a bit of time working on it, so why not pick something that you are interested in. You may wish to investigate something that could lead to graduate school or information relevant to becoming a great Doctor of Physical Therapy. You may also wish to use this to investigate the cellular mechanisms responsible for something like how the drug glucophage taken by your diabetic uncle changes the insulin sensitivity in your overweight-diabetic uncle, how flavonoids in the diet serve as antioxidant compounds to prevent lipid peroxidation, or how pyrethrins in flea shampoo form irreversible inhibitors of the enzyme acetylcholinesterase in a flea.....BUT not the canine host.

Try and limit your topic as much as possible. Try and get instructor feedback on your topic to help you find a great topic for a great paper. The key to a good term paper is to LIMIT your topic. Making your topic as specific as possible means you are responsible for less and can describe it in greater detail. Try and get a PubMed search down to about 20-100 papers, of these you will be able to sort the good from the bad, narrowing your topic even further.

"Like every well-written story, a scientific manuscript should have a beginning (Introduction), middle (Materials and Methods), and an end (Results). The Discussion (the moral of the story) puts the study in perspective of others. The Conclusion repeats the most important take-home message. The Abstract is a condensed summary of the story. The Title gives the story a name" The references tell the reader how you justified the truth of your story: Liumbungu GM, Velati C, Pasqualetti P, and Massimo Eranchini Fj. How to write a scientific manuscript for publication. Blood Transfus. 2013; 11: 217-226

Paper requirements: (rough and final drafts) must have the following:

Paper Requirements: The term paper should consist of a concise literature review that expands upon the generalizations discussed in the sentences of your abstract. A good paper has clearly labeled sections headings and sub-headings. Length of Paper: The TEXT of this paper must be typed (12 cpi) and single-spaced. The paper (with references section) must include a minimum 1200 words of single spaced "text" - excluding the reference section-save/print a screen shot from the "review" option in microsoft word to validate the word count-put this on last page after references). If you are writing a group paper with more than one author, please add a few more words to the total (1500 words). You are WELCOME to write a collaborative paper (two authors) for the same topic, please see instructor if you choose to do this, collaborative effort is what grad school/med school/PT school is all about.

Please print Front-Back to save a few trees. The type font size must be 12, new times roman (use one inch margin). The font style must be one of the standard fonts and consistently used for all text in the paper. If in doubt, show a sample to the instructor. The paper needs to include at least 10 references from peer-reviewed sources, at least five of which need to have been published more recently than 2008, you are welcome to have many more than 10. If your topic does not have any "new" sources you will need to modify the topic or choose a new one. Books and websites do not count towards the 10 references of course.

The paper (single spaced only) should include each of the following parts that were described in the outline. Abstract 200-300 words. Introduction: About 1/4 page that tells reader what the paper is about and why topic is important/critically significant. The last sentence of introduction is required to be a purpose statement (The purpose of this paper is, ...) The body of paper-see above- should be broken into discrete headings and sub-headings. The Discussion or Summary section (about a 1/2 page) should repeat the key points of the paper and perhaps discuss where the topic of interest appears to be going in the future. Literature Cited section should list references in
