first A richer picture of people and relationships expands our understanding of different people and lifestyles associated with ID The second section Where current policies fall short finds that Supported Living provides just as mediocre a form of care as group homes and concludes that services for people with challenging behaviour are unrelated to need The contributors research identifies no effective employment support strategies as well as technological and legal changes that prevent organisations from employing people with ID With nearly a quarter of this population in poor health the contributors reflect on whether social model approaches should be allowed to trump medical considerations The third section New thinking about well being reveals that being old poor and living alone increases health risk and that medication administration is significantly more complex for people with ID Moving beyond 20th century certainties surrounding intellectual disability this book will be of interest to those studying contemporary issues facing those living with ID as well as those studying public health policy more widely The chapters in this book were originally published in issues of the Journal of Intellectual Developmental Disability
