Research Handbook on Global Climate Constitutionalism Jordi Jaria-Manzano, Susana Borràs, 2019-12-27 Climate change is causing traditional political and legal concepts to be revisited. The emergence of a global polity through physical, economic, and social interaction demands global responses which should be founded upon new principles and which cannot simply be modelled on traditional constitutionalism centred on the nation state. This Research Handbook explores how to build this climate constitutionalism at a global level starting from the narrative of Anthropocene and its implications for law. It provides a critical approach to global environmental constitutionalism analysing the problems of sustainability and global equity which are entwined with the causes and consequences of climate change. The Handbook explores how to develop constitutional discourses and strategies to address these issues and thereby tackle the negative effects of climate change whilst also advancing a more sustainable, equitable and responsible global society.

Historical Geography, GIScience and Textual Analysis Charles Travis, Francis Ludlow, Ferenc Gyuris, 2020-02-29 This book illustrates how literature history and geographical analysis complement and enrich each other's disciplinary endeavors. The Hun Lenox Globe constructed in 1510 contains the Latin phrase Hic sunt dracones (Here be dragons) warning sailors of the dangers of drifting into uncharted waters. Nearly half a millennium earlier, the practice of earth writing (geographia) emerged from the cloisters of the great library of Alexandria as a discipline blending the twin pursuits of Strabo's poetic impression of places and Herodotus' chronicles of events and cultures. Eratosthenes, a librarian at Alexandria, and the mathematician Ptolemy employed geometry as another language with which to pursue earth writing. From this ancient East Mediterranean fount, the streams of literary perception, historical record, and geographical analysis, phenomenological and Euclidean, found confluence. The aim of this collection is to recover such means and seek the fount of such rich waters by exploring relations between historical geography, geographic information science, GIS, geoscience, and textual analysis. The book discusses and illustrates current case studies, trends, and discourses in European, American, and Asian spheres where historical geography is practiced in concert with human and physical applications of GIS and the broader geosciences, and the analysis of text broadly conceived as archival, literary, historical, cultural, climatic, scientific, digital, cinematic, and media. Time as a multi-scaled concept, again broadly conceived, is the pivot around which the interdisciplinary contributions to this volume revolve. In The Landscape of Time (2002), the historian John Lewis Gaddis posits: What if we were to think of history as a kind of mapping? He links the ancient practice of mapmaking with the three-part conception of time: past, present, and future. Gaddis presents the practices of cartography and historical narrative as attempts to manage infinitely complex subjects by imposing abstract grids to frame the phenomena being examined: longitude and latitude to frame landscapes, and occidental and oriental temporal scales to frame timescapes. Gaddis contends that if the past is a landscape and history is the way we represent it, then it follows that pattern recognition constitutes a primary form of human perception, one that can be parsed empirically, statistically, and phenomenologically In turn this volume reasons that literary historical cartographical scientific mathematical and counterfactual narratives create their own spatio temporal frames of reference Confluences between the poetic and the positivistic the empirical and the impressionistic the epic and the episodic and the chronologic and the chorologic can be identified and studied by integrating practices in historical geography GIScience geoscience and textual analysis As a result new perceptions and insights facilitating further avenues of scholarship into uncharted waters emerge The various ways in which geographical historical and textual perspectives are hermeneutically woven together in this volume illuminates the different methods with which to explore terrae incognitae of knowledge beyond the shores of their own separate disciplinary islands

Environmental Hazards and Resilience Dennis J. Parker, Edmund C. Penning-Rowsell, 2021-08-26 Building resilience to the world's increasingly damaging environmental hazards has become a priority This book considers the scientific advances which have been made around the world to enhance this resilience Although resilience is not new it is through the idea of resilience that governments organisations and communities around the world are now seeking to address the rapidly increasing losses that environmental hazards cause so that fewer lives are lost and damage is reduced Alternative ideas and approaches have been helpful in reducing loss but resilience offers a fresh and potentially effective means of reducing it further Adopting a scientific approach and scientific evidence is important in applying the resilience idea in hazard mitigation However the science of resilience is at an immature stage of development with much discussion about the concept and how it should be understood and interpreted Building useful theories remains a challenge although some of the building blocks of theory have been developed More attention has been given to developing indicators and frameworks of resilience which are subsequently applied to measure resilience to hazards such as flooding earthquake and climate change Environmental Hazards and Resilience Theory and Evidence considers the scientific and theoretical challenges of making progress in applying resilience to environmental hazard mitigation and provides examples from around the world including the USA New Zealand China Bangladesh and elsewhere The chapters in this book were originally published in the

Johnson, 2020-01-17 The ocean and its inhabitants sketch and stretch our understandings of law in unexpected ways Inspired by the blue turn in the social sciences and humanities Blue Legalities explores how regulatory frameworks and governmental infrastructures are made reworked and contested in the oceans Its interdisciplinary contributors analyze topics that range from militarization and Maori cosmologies to island building in the South China Sea and underwater robotics Throughout Blue Legalities illuminates the vast and unusual challenges associated with regulating the turbulent materialities and lives of the sea Offering much more than an analysis of legal frameworks the chapters in this volume show how the more than human ocean is central to the construction of terrestrial institutions and modes of governance By thinking with the more than human ocean Blue Legalities questions what we think we know and what we don't know about oceans our earthly planet and ourselves Contributors Stacy Alaimo

The Fragmentation of Aid Timo Casjen Mahn, Mario Negre, 2016-08-31 This edited volume provides an assessment of an increasingly fragmented aid system Development cooperation is fundamentally changing its character in the wake of global economic and political transformations and an ongoing debate about what constitutes and how best to achieve global development This also has important implications for the setup of the aid architecture The increasing number of donors and other actors as well as goals and instruments has created an environment that is increasingly difficult to manoeuvre Critics describe today's aid architecture as fragmented inefficient overly complex and rigid in adapting to the dynamic landscape of international cooperation By analysing the actions of donors and new development actors this book gives important insights into how and why the aid architecture has moved in this direction The contributors also discuss the associated costs but also potential benefits of a diverse aid system and provide some concrete options for the way forward
