Assembling Policy Sebastian Ureta, 2015-11-20 An examination of how human beings are brought into the planning of complex infrastructure projects through analysis of a controversial public transportation project Policymakers are regularly confronted by complaints that ordinary people are left out of the planning and managing of complex infrastructure projects In this book Sebastian Ureta argues that humans both individually and collectively are always at the heart of infrastructure policy the issue is how they are brought into it Ureta develops his argument through the case of Transantiago a massive public transportation project in the city of Santiago proposed in 2000 launched in 2007 and in 2012 called the worst public policy ever implemented in our country by a Chilean government spokesman Ureta examines Transantiago as a policy assemblage formed by an array of heterogeneous elements including crucially human devices or artifacts and practices through which humans were brought into infrastructure planning and implementation Ureta traces the design and operation of Transantiago through four configurations crisis infrastructuration disruption and normalization In the crisis phase humans were enacted both as consumers and as participants in the transformation of Santiago into a world class city but during infrastructuration the active citizen went missing The launch of Transantiago caused huge disruptions in part because users challenged their role as mere consumers and instead enacted unexpected human devices Resisting calls for radical reform policymakers insisted on normalizing Transantiago transforming it into a permanent failing system Drawing on Chile s experience Ureta argues that if we understand policy as a series of heterogeneous assemblages infrastructure policymaking would be more inclusive reflexive and responsible Sociological Abstracts Leo P.
