

Paris Welcomes World Advertising Convention

40 Nations on List, Record Number for World Convention

Delegates to Find French Abreast of Progress in Advertising Techniques

By CHARLES MAILLARD,
President of the Third World Advertising
Convention,
President of the Continental Advertising

A TYPING contest with the United World Advertising Convention is opening its doors to all who are interested in the origin of the movement, which has served to bring it about. The contest is being held in London, and was started in the United States quite a long time ago. It is the result of the efforts of the United World Advertising Convention, which is a non-profit organization, and is the only one in the United States that has been recognized by the United States government. The contest is being held in London, and is the only one in the United States that has been recognized by the United States government. The contest is being held in London, and is the only one in the United States that has been recognized by the United States government.

When a world conference held in London in 1924, to which I had been invited, and at which a French Professor advertising himself as representing the associations there in the world was given the floor, he said that there should be no president, as it was then decided without sufficient notice to the members. Discussion, in principle, every day followed, and after the first day, the meeting was in Berlin in 1929, London, Copenhagen and then the formation of what was called the International Advertising Association took place. This had three branches, the American, the British and the United Kingdom and the Continental, and the Continental Advertising Group was formed. Several groups including Great

Also at this time it was informally decided that in principle a world convention could be held in Europe every five years. It was thus that, following the London Convention of 1924, we met in Berlin in 1929.

It was recognized that in 1964 movements should be held in France, but unfortunately in that year the general strike had already started, with multiple national and international complications of such a nature that it was not possible to organize a meeting for the second year, which seemed practically irreparable as it could be linked with the International Exhibition of Art and Technique in 1965 in Paris, which has just opened.

The proposition that the French section of the Continental Advancing Union made to the Harveian Congress that it should organize a "World Congress" was removed by the London Harveian Congress and was not accepted. It remained only as a slogan to the Harveian Congress, which was held in London in 1891. Very probably because of this fact

FOREWORD

NOTHING could be more timely or appropriate than the International Advertising Convention, made up of recognized experts in publicity, which is opening this week in Paris. It is devoted to the art and technique of publicizing what grimes and industry have accomplished, so well demonstrated in the Paris International Exposition of 1937.

TO the delegates of this convention in Paris we can but speak a cordial welcome. We hope they will feel repaid by their visit to the great Exposition along the banks of the Seine, which is based on a conception that does credit to the French genius. We hope, too, that those who come from overseas and across the Channel, as well as from Germany, Italy and Scandinavian countries, will feel compensated by the exchange of mutual ideas on advertising, on how to bring the customer to the goods, which this convention should bring forth.

OF all the instruments modern industry and business has utilized in its expansion in the last half-century none can out rival that of advertising. The ancient business world scarcely knew it at all. But since 1900 advertising has been not only the means but an evidence of business success. Given a meritorious product anywhere, if properly used, this outgrowth of the printing press has proved that it can promote its distribution and increase its sales a thousandfold.

IT has been instrumental in pulling countries like the United States and Great Britain out of the depression. It can do the same for business in other countries. Today pictorially and by the printed word it is the handmaiden of business enterprise and progress.

THE International Exposition, with such titles as Paris 1975 and Paris 1976, in the last sixty years, covers an area of more than 200 acres on both banks of the Seine, contains the pavilions of forty-four nations, including the United States, and is guaranteed by contract and award for the very variety, the

The same, every one of the forty-two countries, with native art, the products which the cinema produce. But the Russians are more than that. It is a fact that they produce the cinema of the entire of the continent. And it is, at the same time, a reflection of the political temper of the time. For several nations have been the theatre of the Soviet's anti-imperialist propaganda, their own governmental polemics, adding to the interest of detracting from it.

At present almost only of the Exposition's 200 odd millions are open to the public. Admission to the Exposition entrance, costing $10, is made available every second period. The gates are open at 9 a.m. and do not close until midnight. For persons speaking no French interpretations are stationed at the important entrances.

There are two gates open to the west. One of the villages, which is called "Sung," is the Gate of Hsin. At the Tzu-chang, reached by means of the clearly marked Tzu-chang road, is the Gate of the East. The road is marked by this gate. The second gate, the Cheng gate, is at the end of an avenue and at the end of the avenue is the gate of the West.

It is significant that the third World Advertising Convention is meeting in Paris during the great International Exposition whose dazzling patterns and patterns line the banks of the Seine. On all sides to be seen, Paris, that most metropolitan of cities, the best ground for international manifestations.

The Paris Exposition itself is an apothecary of international advertising. It is a place where nations are competing to display the excellence of their products and the natural resources of their countries. It is the greatest field of publicity France has ever staged. For the first time, the eyes of the world, outside an enthusiastic welcome to the thousands of Americans who are flocking to Paris during the sessions of the World Advertising Convention, is cast upon the advertising of the United States. It is intended to give them a real insight into the advertising of this country. Will Great Paris be dazzled and back as ever, a center of business enter-

Werner Herzog's Answer

The American Delegation to the convention, in particular, may be assured of a most cordial reception. The delegates have been told by the president that they brought the representatives of the science of advertising from the United States and that it is their duty to enlighten France in this science. The president of the advertising has made no such pretense that Americans may find they have not only much to teach but also much to learn.

In some regard to social problems of modern advertising Americans and French will find themselves united. Both realize the necessity of ensuring the honesty of advertising and of creating a new relationship to extirpate its objectionable elements. There has no dishonest advertising in one of the chief aims of the present conventions, and it is hoped all nations will join in attacking.

Ninety-five per cent of all advertising published in newspapers, magazines, and books today, is honest and sincere. It is the most important cause of the present depression. As evidence, the small amount of advertising is shown that is calculated to destroy publicity in the public mind. All nations are suffering from this cause, and it is necessary to raise the standard of advertising and a high standard of publishing in which the advertiser is not deceived and better. To this goal is aimed by the World Advertising Commission in Paris. It will have fulfilled
