Nanomaterials characteristics such as large surface area, capacity to easily reach into contaminated sites, good reactivity and possibility of being developed to present photocatalytic activity and/or to deal with targeted substances by chemical surface modification are useful specially to perform remediation. As an alternative to conventional physicochemical methods, the green based synthesis protocols reject the use of harmful reagents, prevent waste production, apply renewable energy source and/or materials and consider in first place offering the smallest negative impact possible to living beings and to the ecosystem. Green synthesis in nanotechnology field involves the use of seaweeds, bacteria, cyanobacteria, yeasts, fungi, plants, living organisms, biomass extracts and/or bio-derived products to generate the nanomaterials. The introductory chapter will be dedicated to nanomaterials characteristics that enable them to be used in environmental remediation. The first part of the book will be dedicated to organic and inorganic pollution and the threats they pose to living forms, advantages, disadvantages and mechanisms of nanoremediation, comparison between conventional strategies of environmental pollution remediation and the green nanoremediation, carbon based and non carbon based green nanomaterials capable of promoting environs remediation, cost benefits of using nanomaterials and nanoinformatics to a safe nanotechnology. The second part will be dedicated to green nanoremediation of water and soil, microbe based, algae based and plant based synthesis of nanomaterials to nanoremediation. This part will also contain chapters dedicated to relevant nanomaterials for green nanoremediation, protocols, nano phyto remediation strategies, strategies to evaluate the efficiency of protocols related to this kind of remediation, main interactions of green nanomaterials and microbes during nanoremediation and as a consequence of its biocompatibility of green nanomaterials. This book's main purpose is to offer readers extensive knowledge on green nanoremediation as a feasible strategy to fight pollution's harmful consequences and clean environmental pollution but also present the challenges that should be surpassed.

Holt People, Places, and Change Robert J. Sager, 2003 Labor-environmental Coalitions Thomas Estabrook, Charles Levenstein, John Wooding, 2018-10-04 In 1984 the oil chemical and atomic workers began a 5 year campaign to win back the jobs of its members locked out by the BASF Corp in Geismar Louisiana The multiscale campaign involved coalitions with local environmentalists as well as international solidarity from environmental and religious organizations The local coalition which helped break the lockout was maintained and expanded in the 1990s This alliance is one of numerous labor community coalitions to emerge increasingly over the past 20 years Labor Environmental Coalitions Lessons from a Louisiana Petrochemical Region traces the development of the Louisiana Labor Neighbor Project from 1985 to the present within the context of a long history of divisions between labor and community in the U S The Project continued after the lockout thriving during 1990s expanding from one community to four counties to include 20 local member organizations and broadening its agenda from the original jobs crisis and pollution problems to address a wide range of worker environmental health and economic justice issues Labor Environmental Coalitions explores the dynamics of the Louisiana coalition to offer lessons for other coalition efforts The book seeks to understand coalitions as a necessary strategy to counteract the dominant forces of capitalist development The author contends that the Labor Neighbor Project like labor community coalitions generally created a unique blend of politics shaped by the geographic nature industry s politics by the relative openness of government and by the class experience of labor and community members The Louisiana Project demonstrates that for labor community coalitions to thrive they must broaden their agenda strengthen their leadership and coalition building skills and develop access to multiscale resources The author argues that for labor community coalitions to have longer term political impact they should adopt an explicitly progressive approach by building a broader class and cultural leadership and by demanding state and corporate accountability on economic public health and environmental justice issues Popular Mechanics
