

ACHIEVING PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT SUCCESS THROUGH A CONSOLIDATED SIMULATION PLATFORM

January 2018

- Automated design analysis
enabling product development

- Multi-physics simulation
analysis

Report highlights

Traditionally, the engineering challenge has been to execute analysis by applying it separately to evaluate the impact of different design alternatives.

When the need to model multiple engineering disciplines within a simulation is recognized, the complexity and design process increases. For technical accountability, ensuring consistency that designs are delivered, product-level simulation platform offers a solution. platform built on enterprise-level

Implementing a consolidated simulation platform reduces costs, speeds time-to-market. When implemented, this global enterprise structure enables strategic growth, optimized for multiple disciplines.

As part of the corporate strategy to drive innovation, the report addresses how engineering can be supported by a multi-physics simulation. Specifically, it will look at how simulation can be used to support product development and design. The report will also look at how simulation can be used to support product development and design. The report will also look at how simulation can be used to support product development and design.
