BUSINESS INTELLIGENCE

Knowledge about the role and significance of data and information in decision-making processes in various spheres of human activity exist for thousands of years (Tzu, 2000). The processes of collecting, processing and analyzing business information that make business decisions (intelligence) are well documented in a series of papers (Meyer, 1991; Dedijer, 2003). However, only a modern period has fully indicated the importance of information. Through the third wave model, Alvin Toffler has demonstrated in detail and convincingly that in modern times characterized by accelerated changes (with positive and negative sign) in all spheres of society and human activity, high technology and information play a central role (Toffler, 1980). The concept of business intelligence on the world scene was launched in 1989 by Howard Dresner, then chief analyst at the American consulting firm GartnerGroup Inc. from Stamford. From the moment of its creation, this traditionally non-economic concept (intelligence) has been strongly influenced in economies all over the world. Moreover, business intelligence has gained the role of an instrument without which business in modern terms is unimaginable. More precisely, business intelligence is simply a prerequisite for business success. The reason is very simple: quality, accurate and timely business information transferred into business knowledge, which is the basis for a business decision, is a condition for business success. This is exactly the object, interest, goal and framework of the business intelligence business. A more significant analysis indicates the existence of a series of disputes and dilemmas
