Reading: read the first two sections on genetic variation in peromyscus completely (both) and the following questions. Respond to these prior understanding of the concepts discussed in the lecture.

1. Match each of the following changes in chromosome structure to its definition:

☒ A. Crossing

☐ B. Duplication

☐ C. Inversion

☐ D. Translocation

1a. is fusion of 2 chromosomes by their ends

1b. is fusion of 2 chromosomes in distal ends

1c. is segment of one chromosome that moves and attaches to different chromosome (translocation, chromosome)

1d. is fusion of 2 chromosomes (segment from one moves from one to other)

2. How many genetically different gametes can be produced from a diploid cell with 4 pairs of chromosomes (pairs)? Explain your answer.

Answer: the number of genetically different gametes that can be produced is equal to 2^n where n is total number of chromosomes pairs. In this case with 4 pairs of chromosomes we have $2^4 = 16$ genetically different gametes.

3. Although you will learn a mechanism of mutation prior to learning how mutations that occur, mutations cause the loss of genetic information. For example, both color and eye shape may occur. How do mutations together?

Both mutations are linked together and occur on the same chromosome. This means that the two genes are inherited together, and a mutation in one gene will only affect one trait. Mutations in different genes will be inherited and occur separately in the genome. In this case, the mutations will be inherited together.

4. Describe the alignment of chromosomes during prophase I, write the sequence.

During prophase I, chromosomes condense and homologous chromosomes align together, called synapsis. This is a synapsis because it allows the chromosomes to exchange genetic material and results in new genetic combinations.

5. How does recombination lead to chromosomal polymorphism? Describe how types of genetic mutations that can result from recombination.
