Constructing Educational Achievement Sivan Phillipson, Kelly Ku, Shane Phillipson, 2014-06-03 International interest focuses on why pupils from East Asia tend to outperform pupils from the West and scholars have proposed a number of possible explanations to account for these international trends Using Vygotsky's theory 1978 as a conceptual framework to construct school achievement this book puts forward culturally relevant context for understanding developmental aspects of children's school achievement and their implication to classroom practice and education progress Converging the two important lines of inquiry the child factor and the sociocultural factor this book showcases evidence based scholarly works from across the globe that shed light on causes of academic achievement in different contexts The book brings together eminent scholars from early childhood primary education secondary and vocational education who expertly capture the vitality of development and processes of specific child factors and their interaction with their environment that explain their school achievement Foregrounded in the five planes of cultural historical institutional social personal and mental the research explain how children think learn and form the will to perform amidst the changing social and family environment and challenging school and educational environment Young Children Learning Barbara Tizard, Martin Hughes, 2008-04-15 This fascinating account of an unusual research project challenges many assumptions about how young children learn and how best to teach them In particular it turns upside down the commonly held belief that professionals know better than parents how to educate and bring up children and it throws doubt on the theory that working class children underachieve at school because of a language deficit at home The second edition of this bestselling text includes a new introduction by Judy Dunn Fascinating account of an unusual research project challenges many assumptions about how young children Turns upside down the commonly held belief that professionals know better than parents how to educate and bring up children Throws doubt on the theory that working class children underachieve at school because of a language deficit at home The authors evidence is the children s own conversations which are quoted extensively and are delightful The second edition of this bestselling text includes an introduction by Judy Dunn Understanding Research in Early Education Margaret M. Clark,2005-11-22 This second edition of Understanding Research in Early Education examines and discusses both recent and historical research in understandable yet rigorous language and evaluates a wide variety of large and small scale research reports and projects The research is set in its historical context and related to recent reports and contemporary issues Margaret Clark highly respected in the field uses her own unique approach to illustrate how to avoid common pitfalls in misrepresenting research findings what questions should be asked in order to help inform students own research projects how findings can be applied and used in the classroom or nursery to improve practice The book is divided into clear sections for ease of use and is suitable for those with no prior expertise in research and research methodologies It will prove an invaluable and fascinating read for undergraduate and postgraduate students taking courses in early years education and practitioners undertaking continuing professional development Working with Parents Roy McConkey,2025-08-05 In the 1980s working with parents in the education and care of their children was more often preached than practised by professionals However recent government committees and legislation both in the UK and USA at the time had repeatedly stressed the importance of parental participation This applied not only to children with special needs but to all children and indeed there was considerable evidence to suggest that parents wanted to be involved and that the child benefited as a result Originally published in 1985 Working with Parents aimed at professionals in training or newly qualified drew together for the first time many examples of how partnership with parents can evolve and be successful It not only gives detailed suggestions for working with parents on a one to one basis but also describes how to handle parent groups organise courses give effective talks and use video The author draws on his wide and well known experience to give specific instances such as his work on language with children with learning disabilities that illustrate general principles The book is written in a lively practical style and should still be of great value to teachers in both special and mainstream education and others such as speech therapists psychologists and community workers This book is a re issue originally published in 1985 The language used is a reflection of its era and no offence is meant by the Publishers to any reader by this re publication Learning Disabilities: Issues and Recommendations for Research, 1974 National Institute of Education (U.S.),1974 Learning Disabilities Suzanne Gage Brainard,1975 Childhood Language Disorders in Context Nickola

Nelson,1993 Here is a comprehensive introduction to language disorders in children one whose two fold developmental contextual perspective acknowledges that children s language learning systems include not only their skills knowledge and biological abilities but also their language background family settings and the context in which they are attempting to learn language The text s primary focus is on perspectives from normal development and the bulk of the coverage is devoted to examination of expectations for early infant through toddler middle preschool through early elementary and later middle elementary through adolescent stages of learning language These developmentally geared divisions are then used to guide discussions of language assessment and intervention for children who are not learning language normally yet who have characteristics in common with their peers who are

Helping Children Learn Sara Meadows,Asher Cashdan,2017-09-13 Originally published in 1988 this volume presented a new understanding of how teachers in early childhood education helped children learn It carefully and critically reviews different teaching approaches and evaluates two innovatory teaching techniques which were at the focus of recent action research studies and which complemented the traditional early childhood curriculum at the time The book is intended for all those concerned with early education including students in initial training or those doing inservice courses for children between 3 and 7 Its contents will still be of relevance to people interested in playgroups and parent education

Researching the Early Years Continuum Pat Broadhead,1996 Makes a case for considering the years from birth to eight as a continuum of development and learning The text draws on research undertaken by nursery and primary teachers in conjunction with LEAs and by HE staff
