

Manifest Destiny:

- A phrase that expressed the popular belief that the U.S. had a divine mission to extend its power and civilization across the breadth of North America.
- Enthusiasm for expansion reached a fever pitch in the 1840s; it was driven by a number of forces, including:
  - Nationalism
  - Population increase
  - Rapid economic development
  - Technological advances
  - Reform ideals
- Not all Americans supported manifest destiny and expansionism....Northern critics argued that at the root of expansionist drive was the southern ambition to spread slavery into western lands.

Texas:

- In 1823, after having won its national interdependence from Spain, Mexico hoped to attract settlers to farm its sparsely populated northern frontier province of Texas.
- By 1830, Americans (both white farmers and black slaves) outnumbered the Mexicans in Texas by three to one.

Stephen Austin:

- Known as the "Father of Texas"
- Brought 300 families into Texas, thus beginning a steady migration of American settlers into the vast frontier territory.

Antonio López de Santa Anna:

- A Mexican political leader who greatly influenced early Mexican and Spanish politics and government, first fighting against independence from Spain, and then becoming its chief general and president at various times over a chaotic 40-year career.
- In 1834, General Antonio López de Santa Anna made himself dictator of Mexico and abolished the nation's federal system of government.

Sam Houston:

- A leader of the Texas Revolution. He supported annexation by the U.S. rather than seeking long term independence and expansion for Texas.
- When Santa Anna insisted on enforcing Mexico's laws in Texas, a group of American settlers led by Sam Houston revolted and declared Texas to be an independent republic (March 1836).

Alamo:

- Santa Anna's forces killed 187-250 Texian defenders at the Battle of the Alamo (February 23 - March 6, 1836) and executed 350 plus Texan prisoners at the Goliad Massacre (March 27, 1836).
- Despite the win, the 13-day holdout stalled the Mexican Army's progress and allowed Sam Houston to gather troops and supplies for his later success at the Battle of San Jacinto.

John Tyler:

- The tenth President of the United States (1841-1845).
- Was a southern Whig who was worried about the growing influence of the British in Texas.
- He worked to annex Texas, but the U.S. Senate rejected his treaty of annexation in 1844.

Aroostook War (1838-1839):

- Known as "battle of the maps," this was a conflict between rival groups of lumbermen on the Maine-Canadian border.
- The dispute resulted in a mutually accepted boundary between the present-day state of Maine and provinces of New Brunswick and Quebec.

Webster-Ashburton Treaty (1842):

- Negotiated by U.S. Secretary of State Daniel Webster and the British ambassador, Lord Alexander Ashburton.
- In the treaty, the disputed territory was split between Maine and British Canada.
- The treaty also settled the boundary of the Minnesota territory, leaving what proved to be iron-rich Mesabi range on the U.S. side of the border.

Oregon territory:

- At one time, this territory (which originally stretched as far north as the Alaskan border) was claimed by four different nations: Spain, Russia, Great Britain, and the United States.
  - Spain gave up its claims to Oregon in the Adams-Onís Treaty of 1819.
- Britain based its claim to Oregon on the Hudson Fur Company's profitable fur trade with the Native Americans of the Pacific Northwest.
- The U.S. based its claim on:
  - The discovery of the Columbia River by Captain Robert Gray in 1792.
  - The overland expedition to the Pacific Coast by Meriwether Lewis and William Clark in 1805.
