An Anthropological Exploration of Identity and Social Interaction in a Multi-ethnic Classroom Ruth Barley, 2013 Drawing on research findings from an ethnography conducted with young children exploring notions of difference identity and patterns of interaction this study uncovers how four and five year olds conceptualise and operationalise identity in a multi ethnic Early Years classroom in the North of England Situated in a particular local context the study provides an indepth insight into the experiences of a diverse group of children from North and Sub Saharan African countries who have come together in a single school setting I show how these children are influenced by social structures such as those pertaining to racism gender inequality Islamophobia the war on terror and events in the Arab Spring This original focus fills a gap in the literature which has predominantly focused on children from South Asian families currently living in the UK Revealing how identities unfold over time the research shows that children s everyday social interactions are enabled and constrained by these wider structural discourses as they re negotiate their identities against this complex backdrop Dynamic local and global politics the arrival of new classmates changes in family structures and Koranic school attendance all influence children s everyday sense of self and are reflected in the development of peer relationships at school Over the course of the 2010 11 academic year I spent a day a week with Sunnyside s reception class Adhering to participatory principles that are intrinsic to both ethnography and childhood studies Cheney 2011 children were involved in developing the focus of the study the design of research tools and later on in data collection and analysis Research methods focused on children in order to gain their perspectives on their social world s However informal conversations with practitioners and family members were also used in order to clarify particular themes arising in the study Observations conversations with children and research activities allowed snap shots to be taken capturing particular moments or experiences that were then collaboratively analysed with children When constructing the written ethnography these snap shots were drawn together into a photo gallery allowing individuals narratives to be told and a deep understanding of their experiences to be illuminated Throughout ethnography s distinct focus on culture process of seeking to uncover emic perspectives and narrative output Wolcott 1999 were employed Developing a theoretical framework that understands identity as performative situated and dialectical this thesis discusses the dual roles of structural discourses and social agency within the context of identity re negotiation Framing identity within a strong structuration framework that seeks to understand ontology in situ this thesis uncovers how young children understand notions of self and others It explores how wider social discourses of discrimination and hierarchies of difference play a part in how young children understand ethnic religious and gender difference The way in which children conceptualise and operationalise difference relates to the duality of structure the intersectionality between different aspects of identity and the links that children make between macro and micro social contexts The thesis unearths how young children explore their own and their peers identities amongst themselves before raising questions for how policy and practice can best support children in this aspect of their social development

Language, Interaction and National Identity Stephen Hester, William Housley, 2017-05-15 Contemporary political and public discourse has come alive with the issues and conflicts surrounding questions of national identity Despite the widespread sociological attention it has drawn as a result most studies of national identity have been conducted at considerable analytical distance from the lived reality of national identity talk This collection brings together the work of contemporary researchers situating the talk and interaction in which national identities are actually expressed and used The book presents detailed investigations of how persons actually use national identity in their talk the interactional uses to which such expressions are put and the interactional consequences of such identity talk The studies are based on transcribed tape recordings of naturally occurring talk across a variety of different countries and settings illuminating not only situated national identity talk as a phenomenon in its own right but also providing empirically grounded research for traditional sociological theorising about issues of integration devolution and exclusion Ethics and Integrity in Research with Children and Young People Grace Spencer,2021-11-04 This international and multi disciplinary edited collection unpacks some of the ethical complexities of conducting research with children and young people The chapters in the volume offer an applied perspective to navigating contemporary and complicated ethical issues that can arise in the field of childhood and youth centred research International Handbook of Psychology in Education Karen Littleton,Clare Wood,Judith Kleine Staarman,2010-05-26 Provides researchers practitioners and advisers working in the fields of psychology and education with an overview of research across a broad spectrum of work within the domain of psychology of education This book focuses on typically developing school age children although issues relating to specific learning difficulties are also addressed Dialogic Learning Jos van den Linden,Peter Renshaw,2006-01-12 Contemporary researchers have analysed dialogue primarily in terms of instruction conversation or inquiry There is an irreducible tension when the terms dialogue and instruction are brought together because the former implies an emergent process of give and take whereas the latter implies a sequence of predetermined moves It is argued that effective teachers have learned how to perform in this contradictory space to both follow and lead to be both responsive and directive to require both independence and receptiveness from learners Instructional dialogue therefore is an artful performance rather than a prescribed technique Dialogues also may be structured as conversations which function to build consensus conformity to everyday ritualistic practices and a sense of community The dark side of the dialogic we and the community formed around our and us is the inevitable boundary that excludes them and theirs When dialogues are structured to build consensus and community critical reflection on the bases of that consensus is required and vigilance to ensure that difference and diversity are not being excluded or assimilated see Renshaw 2002 Again it is argued that there is an irreducible tension here because understanding and appreciating diversity can be achieved only through engagement and living together in communities Teachers who work to create such communities in their classrooms need to balance the need for common practices with the space to be different resistant or challenging again an artful performance that is difficult to articulate in terms of specific teaching techniques Inter-identities' in Life, Mind, and Society Arantza Etxeberria,Kepa Ruiz-Mirazo,Luisa Damiano,2021-08-18 Roma Identity and Ritual in the Classroom Jana Obrovská,2018-09-21 This book addresses the dynamics of interethnic relationships in ethnically mixed classrooms in the Czech Republic The classroom is a space in which the boundaries and meanings of facets of identity such as ethnicity class and gender are negotiated on a daily basis using rich ethnographic data the author grounds the analysis in a novel theoretical framework which uses the traditional concept of ritual to examine peer cultures Highlighting the perspectives of the students themselves their own peer cultures and the agency of the minority youth present in the classroom the book reinforces the idea that the dynamics of peer culture can be the scene for successful peer inclusion strategies as well as a stage for the reproduction of inequalities The author offers a rich array of data from post socialist classrooms which are almost invisible in the dominant debates surrounding ethnicity This revelatory book will be of interest and value to students and scholars of social anthropology the sociology of education and race and ethnicity in education as well as practitioners working with minority youth The SAGE Handbook of Identities Margaret Wetherell, Chandra Talpade

Mohanty, 2010-03-23 Overall its breaking of disciplinary isolation enhancing of mutual understanding and laying out of a transdisciplinary platform makes this Handbook a milestone in identity studies Sociology Increasingly identities are the site for interdisciplinary initiatives and identity research is at the heart of many transdisciplinary research centres around the world No single social science discipline owns identity research which makes it a difficult topic to categorize The SAGE Handbook of Identities systematizes this complex field by incorporating its interdisciplinary character to provide a comprehensive overview of its themes in contemporary research while still acknowledging the historical and philosophical significance of the concept of identity Drawing on a global scholarship the Handbook has four parts Frameworks presents the main theoretical and methodological perspectives in identities research Formations covers the major formative forces for identities such as culture globalisation migratory patterns biology and so on Categories reviews research on the core social categories central to identity such as ethnicity gender sexuality disability and intersections between these Sites and Context develops a series of case studies of crucial sites and contexts where identity is at stake such as social movements relationships work places and citizenship Child Development & Pedagogy YCT Expert Team , 2022 23 TET CTET All

States Child Development Pedagogy Solved Papers Open Spaces for Interactions and Learning Diversities Alessio Surian, 2016-07-08 While changes related to cultural diversity are visible and at work in social cultural and political contexts cultural diversity as such is being ignored or rejected across many countries It is the denial or hidden nature of diversity in educational settings and learning processes reflected in the marginalisation of this topic that this book wants to address The book chapters are blind peer reviewed and draw from a variety of learning settings across the world They are intended to open up spaces to talk promote and struggle for the relevance of addressing learning diversities This includes current and new directions for theoretical and methodological discussions They concern spaces of interaction and diversity research across single and multiple moments different contexts and various time scales They also explore the diversity of theories used to address these issues and how we theorize the relationship between centres and margins in understanding the idea of opening spaces for dialogue
