

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. While many people believe that we should give animals legal rights to humans, others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings, one of which are not usually the same as our own. For example, it has been said that some animals – birds and dolphins – think, that some people like horses do think, animals display the signs of their pain, and while that we should sympathize with human suffering. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protections as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against legal rights for animals, particularly that they do not have the ability of human beings, not least that they do not have a sense of clothing and that their form of behaviour is clearly normal within the natural world. It looks, however, that if we have legal rights open, that would mean that we have not natural relationship is much the same as that of a wolf and a sheep. It would be wrong for us, then, animals for our own benefit because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both supporting that that animals deserve respect, protection, and some legal rights. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are, and laws should be drafted to ensure their protection from undue suffering.
