Varying road-surface and traffic conditions on the highways of the world impose extreme stress on a fast and high-powered motorcycle. Basic requirements are: supreme roadability and roadholding capacity, high driving comfort, acceleration capacity far above the average. Another "must" are most efficient brakes. All these demands are met by the BMW R 50 in an ideal manner: perfect roadholding and steering control through first-class wheel suspension and through rear springs that are adjustable for solo or sidecar use, as well as through race-proved, sensitive brakes. A newly developed ventilating system keeps the rear transmission case clean—as with any BMW twin-cylinder machine. A tachometer and sidecar can be attached to any BMW two cylinder motorcycle.

Blue background removed to improve legibility.

Ventilating system of rear transmission case used with all BMW twin cylinder machines.
