Korean Jindo Michael Stonewood, 2019-04-12 The Korean Jindo is a breed of hunting dog that originates from the Jindo Island which is located in South Korea. The breed is celebrated throughout South Korea for having an extremely brave and loyal nature. The Korean Jindo was traditionally used for hunting purposes due to its courage, intelligence, and pack sensibility. The breed was normally used to hunt medium to large sized game such as deer and boar, but there is actually a South Korean legend that tells of how three Korean Jindos killed a Siberian Tiger during a hunt. Despite this legend seeming unrealistic, there are multiple reports of Korean Jindo killing deer or coyotes without the knowledge or direction of their owners. During a hunt, a pack of Korean Jindo will use their combined strength to take down the prey and then will send a single Jindo back to the hunter to lead him to the prey. The Korean Jindo is a breed of double coated spitz type dog. The breed is split into two types: Tonggot which have a more muscular body and Hudu which have more slender and agile bodies. The breed's coat normally comes in white, fawn, grey, black, and brindle. The temperament of dogs is normally affected by the following factors: individual personality, heredity, training, and socialization. It is therefore important to make sure that you meet the puppy's mother before purchasing a Korean Jindo. It is also important to make sure to thoroughly socialize your Korean Jindo with strangers, children, and other animals during its puppyhood. Generally speaking, the Korean Jindo is an incredibly energetic, affectionate, and loyal breed of dog. It is important to note that when keeping a Korean Jindo, it is important to have a fenced garden; a fence of at least 6ft is recommended as the Korean Jindo is likely to explore its surroundings due to its innate hunting instinct. It is important to note that as a working breed, the Korean Jindo has a high amount of energy which needs to be expended. If the Korean Jindo has a buildup of energy, it is likely to develop destructive behaviors due to boredom or hyperactivity. Before purchasing any pet, it is important to understand that as a pet owner, you are responsible for the care and wellbeing of your pet. It is important to try and learn as much as you can about the animal you are considering to keep as a pet to make sure that your lifestyle, household, and financial status are suited to provide your pet with the best possible care. This guide has been designed to provide you with both precise and concise information about a Korean Jindo's basic needs to help you provide your pet with the best quality care practices.
