

COLONIAL AFRICAN ARCHITECTURE OF FASHION

SEPTIMIO BELLAJUELA

——————

ABSTRACT Architectural history and theory have been the mainstay of architectural education and research for decades. However, the field has been largely dominated by a Eurocentric perspective, which has led to a neglect of the role of architecture in the development of non-Western societies. This paper explores the role of architecture in the development of African societies, with a particular focus on the colonial period. It argues that architecture was not merely a reflection of the social and cultural values of a society, but also a powerful tool for the imposition of European values and the creation of a new social order. The paper examines the role of architecture in the development of African cities, the role of the architect in the colonial context, and the role of architecture in the development of African identity.
