Abstract—The authors examined the relationship between the use of the Internet and the use of other information sources for health information. The authors used data from the 2000 National Health Interview Survey, a nationally representative survey of the U.S. population. The authors examined the use of the Internet and other information sources for health information among adults aged 18 years and older. The authors found that the use of the Internet for health information was associated with the use of other information sources for health information. The authors also found that the use of the Internet for health information was associated with higher education, higher income, and higher health insurance coverage. The authors conclude that the use of the Internet for health information is associated with the use of other information sources for health information, and that the use of the Internet for health information is associated with higher education, higher income, and higher health insurance coverage.
