Ecological Restoration Law Afshin Akhtar-Khavari, Benjamin J. Richardson, 2019-01-25 Ecological restoration is as essential as sustainable development for the health of the biosphere. Restoration, however, has been a low priority of most countries' environmental laws which tend to focus narrowly on rehabilitation of small discrete sites rather than the more ambitious recovery of entire ecosystems and landscapes. Through critical theoretical perspectives and topical case studies, this book's diverse contributors explore a more ambitious agenda for ecological restoration law. Not only do they investigate current laws and other governance mechanisms, they also consider the philosophical and methodological bases for the law to take ecological restoration more seriously. Through exploration of themes relating to time, space, geography, semiotics, social justice, and scientific knowledge, this book offers innovative and critical insights into ecological restoration law.

Practising Development Johan Pottier, 2013-02-01 Throughout the 1980s, there have been calls often from development organizations of global repute for the incorporation of social science perspectives into the design and management of sustainable development programmes. Practising Development is the first collection to offer first-hand critical assessments of the success and failures found within actual responses to these calls. By combining academic and practical experience from anthropology, development, and aid organizations, the contributors examine the processes of intervention, the methods by which this intervention can be assessed.

and explain the socio economic and political worlds within which intervention and development evolve Saving Global Fisheries J. Samuel Barkin, Elizabeth R. Desombre, 2013-01-18 A proposal for a new global approach for fisheries focused on reducing fishing capacity and providing incentives for long term sustainability The Earth's oceans are overfished despite more than fifty years of cooperation among the world's fishing nations There are too many boats chasing too few fish In Saving Global Fisheries J Samuel Barkin and Elizabeth DeSombre analyze the problem of overfishing and offer a provocative proposal for a global regulatory and policy approach Existing patterns of international fisheries management try to limit the number of fish that can be caught while governments simultaneously subsidize increased fishing capacity focusing on fisheries as an industry to be developed rather than on fish as a resource to be conserved Regionally based international management means that protection in one area simply shifts fishing efforts to other species or regions Barkin and DeSombre argue that global rather than regional regulation is necessary for successful fisheries management and emphasize the need to reduce subsidies They propose an international system of individual transferable quotas that would give holders of permits an interest in the long term health of fish stocks and help create a sustainable level of fishing capacity globally
